Fatal head-on car crash closes part of Hwy.118

by MIKE PARK

One person is dead and three others are seriously injured after a two car head on collision on Friday night just north of Haliburton on highway 118 at about 11:00 p.m. Sherry Menashy, 17, of Willowdale, Ontario, was killed in the crash. She was the passenger in her father's car which was driven by Brian Cohen, 20, also of Willowdale.

The OPP says Cohen and Menashy were southbound on highway 118 when they collided with the northbound car of Edward Garnett, 61, of Thornhill. The crash occurred just north of the Dysart garages on highway 118.

The Haliburton Ambulance Service had to dispatch three ambulances to the scene and the Dysart fire department was called out to hose down the cars in case of fire. The OPP blocked off the highway for part of the night while they investigated the accident and re-routed traffic through Minden.

The OPP are still investigating the cause of this tragic accident. Cohen and Garnett are in fair condition in Sunnybrook Hospital in Toronto. Garnett's passenger Terri Jinkinson, 29, was treated and released from the emergency ward that same night.

Planned access dangerous say Kawagama residents

by MIKE PARK
Staff reporter

Resident of Kawagama Lake are up in arms about Dysart et al's plan to add a parking lot and water access point at the end of Kawagama Road. They say it's dangerous and unnecessary.

Al Kiely, a land owner next to the site and spokesman for a group of other adjacent land owners, says the point is the wrong place for an access. He says the point juts out into the biggest part of the lake and that rough water is always a danger. He says the swells can often get to be 1.5 metres high and over the last three years many boats have been sunk in the area. Two have sunk so far this year, he says.

Kiely also says many of the area land owners want the road blocked off to vehicles. He showed the council pictures of the road crowded with vehicles of people ice fishing or trying to launch their boats. He says that he himself has been awakened on many occasions early in the morning by loud noises and people getting stuck in the sand. The spot at the end of the road has also become a favorite party spot.

"It's becoming a booze yard for kids," he says.

Dysart is building the water access and parking lot for new lots on Bear Island in the lake. This is to follow a municipal by-law which states that people with only water access must also have access to a road and have adequate parking on the main land.

Kiely says the government docks that already exist on the lake should be able to take care of that. He says the dangerous waters of the point should be enough for council to reconsider.

Area man killed in a cottage fire

A Guilford Township man was killed early Sunday morning when the cottage he was in burned to the ground.

Randy Allan Griffin, 26, could not escape from the cottage when fire broke out in it at about 5:00 a.m. Sunday morning. Neil Cowey, the owner of the cottage, was awakened by the fire and managed to escape out the window.

The Dysart Fire Department was called to the scene and put the fire out.

The cause of the fire is still not known and the Ontario Fire Marshall's office and the OPP are still investigating.

Hunters against Algonquin's expansion

by MIKE PARK
Staff reporter

A group of local men, mostly hunters and fishermen, showed their displeasure with the Ministry of Natural Resources' plan to add one-third of Eyre township to Algonquin Park at Monday's meeting of the Dysart et al council.

Reeve Murray Fearrey began the meeting by saying the council supported the position of the local men. He says Dysart has been against the transfer since it was proposed over 20 years ago.

The MNR announced on May 17 of this year the land would become, officially, part of the Park next year.

"There's a lot of local opposition to the plan," Fearrey told the MNR's representatives, Parks coordinator George Moraz and Minden District Manager Jim Barker.

Fearrey, and some of the men in the delegation present, says the way the government went about making the land, known as the McRae Addition, was very unfair. The province, he says, promised back in 1983 that it would hold a full public inquiry before transferring the addition. Now, he says, they have broken their promise by announcing the addition without public input. The land was added as part of an Ontario cabinet order.

"The decision was made from the top down instead of the bottom up," says Fearrey, criticizing the way the decision was made.

The hunters are worried that they will no longer be able to hunt or fish on the land now that it is part of Algonquin Park.

Barker tried to reassure the men by pointing out that they will have at least one more season of hunting

Seniors' building started

by JAY KERR-WILSON
Staff Reporter

Construction is under way on 32 new apartments for seniors in Minden and financial assistance for the apartments has been approved by the governments of Canada and Ontario.

The announcement was made by MP for Victoria-Haliburton, Bill Scott and MPP for Victoria-Haliburton John Eakins. The 32-unit development at Prentice Street and Minden Park Road is being sponsored by Staanworth Non-Profit Housing Corporation. The corporation was set up by the municipalities of Stanhope, Lutterworth and Anson, Hindon and Minden to obtain subsidized housing for seniors.

The $2.4 million capital cost of the development is being met with a 35-year mortgage loan. The total operating subsidy for the building is estimated at more than $268,000.

Scott said the project results from the federal-provincial social housing agreement which allows housing needs to be met in the most efficient and effective way possible.

Staanworth chairman Ed Pergolas said the units are scheduled to be completed in February and there is already a waiting list of people wanting to take up residence in the new one and two bedroom apartments. He said there are applications available all over the townships involved in the project.

The federal and provincial governments expect that 25 of the units will be allocated to needy households. Sixty percent of the subsidies on these units will be paid for by the federal government and forty percent will be paid for by the provincial government.

The province will provide subsidies for three units, expected to be made available with rents based on household incomes and the remaining four units are expected to be made available at the market retail price with amounts based initially on rents of comparable accommodation in the community.

Pergolas said the rate hasn't been set yet. He said that the corporation's purpose of facilitating subsidized housing for seniors is an on going process and another survey will have to be done after the unit is completed to determine what needs still have to be met. "First you finish one project and then you start another," said Pergolas, adding that each project involves a lot of work.

Eakins said the Minden project is part of almost 7,000 non-profit units we the government is committing across Ontario in 1988.

Access park's big problem and fishing in the area because the land will remain crown land until next spring. He says at that time, the Park's Management Plan will be reviewed and if enough support is found, the McRae addition will still be allowed hunting and fishing. Trapping, he points out, will not be allowed because it has been banned in all provincial parks.

But that didn't comfort any of the protestors present.

"That's the only multiple use Crown land in the area," said one angry man, "and now your taking that away from us."

The biggest problem is access to the Park. Currently there is no southern access to the Park and Councillor Glen Hodgson says that makes the people of the county feel the Park belongs to every one but them. Hodgson says he lives only five miles from the southern border yet he would have to go around to the east or west gates in order to enter the Park.

He also said it was ridiculous that he would have to go to Huntsville to get a permit to enter the Park. He wants them to be issued in Minden.

Moraz agreed that the permit situation was bad but said that was something that could be cleared up at the management review next spring. Both he and Barker admit access will have to be addressed as well.

That also didn't sit well with the protestors.

"Every time you do something to the damn park," complained one man, "you deny access to 90 per cent of the people who would use it. It's supposed to be for everyone."

He said that most of the fishing lakes are very hard to get to in the summer but easy to get to in the winter because the men can ride their snow machines. But since snowmobiles are not allowed in provincial parks, he added, that effectively eliminates winter fishing.

Barker and Moraz defended themselves by pointing out that the decision was not theirs. They say they are as much the victims as the hunters. Barker says he never knew the addition was actually to be added to the Park this year until the day it happened.

The protestors seemed uninterested in who was to blame. For them the bottom line was that they wanted, and still want, the addition to remain Crown land.

Shoppers had a hey-day Friday night when the Guild opened its annual Summer Show and Sale at J.D. Hodgson School. The crowd proved that a dedication to quality will always be rewarded. For details, see page 10

I don't want to see somebody hurt," he says.

But Reeve Murray Fearey argues that the traffic congestion is exactly why they are building the parking lot. He says the council has received many letters from many of the same local people complaining about strangers parked in their drives or blocking their lanes. The lot, he

But Kiely is still worried about the fact that the area is very rarely policed. He says it takes the OPP so long to respond to a call that it is no use calling them. He and the people he speaks for are worried for their safety. They report shotgun blasts, parties and breaking beer bottles in the wee hours of the morning which keep them up and scare them. They see the parking lot as only making it worse.

"They're increasing the usage (of the area) with no guarantee of control," says Kiely.

The council decided later that some of its members would go to Kawagama Lake and investigate the situation first hand.

Dysart introduces document fee

by MIKE PARK

Staff reporter

Abuse of Dysart's assessment rolls and maps by out-of-town real estate agents has forced the municipality to begin to charge for the use of the documents.

Council decided Monday to charge a flat fee of $2 for help and 50 cents per copy for photocopied

Dysart clerk-treasurer Donna McCallum says the real abusers of the old system were out-of-town agents who didn't know the area and came to the office with long lists to be processed. She says they took up a lot of time with the office staff who could have been doing other jobs.

A similar plan proposed by Lutterworth council in June met with a lot of resistance because of its expense. Lutterworth planned to charge $10 for information which took less than 45 minutes to find and $30 per hour for anything that took longer than 45 minutes.

Dysart does not expect a lot of hassle with their policy because it is a cheaper, flat rate. The motion was forwarded by councillor John Parish, himself a real estate agent.

'They're increasing usage with no guarantee of control,' says an irate resident says, would provide a place for those vehicles so that they wouldn't interfere with the local residents. It is also useful for the people on Bear Island to park their cars and launch their boats, he adds.

Volunteer gets an award

Haliburton Lake resident Ken Morley received a Red Cross Citation at the 68th Annual Meeting of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society held on Friday, June 17, in Hamilton. The award was given in recognition of his dedicated and conscientious volunteer service.

Morley received the Red Cross

Feeling hot! Hot! And more hot!

by JAY KERR-WILSON
Staff Reporter

People who flooded north to Haliburton to escape the record temperatures and blanket of smog that assaulted Toronto last week didn't find much relief unless they stayed in the water.

About the same time the city was experiencing record breaking temperatures of up to 37.6 degrees

Celsius, Haliburton was only fractionally cooler with a maximum temperature of 35 degrees. Between Monday July 4 and Sunday July 10, Haliburton's daytime temperature was never below 30 degrees.

"It's okay down by the water," said Bruce McBurine. "If you have to come into town you do what you have to do and then quickly get back to the lake." McBurine lives in Agincourt and was in Haliburton vacationing with his family.

"Stay near the water with lots of tall cool drinks," was Sandra Stroud's solution to beating the heat. Stroud was cooling off with her 16-month-old daughter Sarah at the Rotary Beach.

Ryan Lewis came up to Haliburton from his home in Mississauga to visit relatives and do little fishing but said it was even too hot for that. "You don't catch many fish when it's this hot," said Lewis. "You need temperatures in the 70's (Fahrenheit) and a cool breeze."

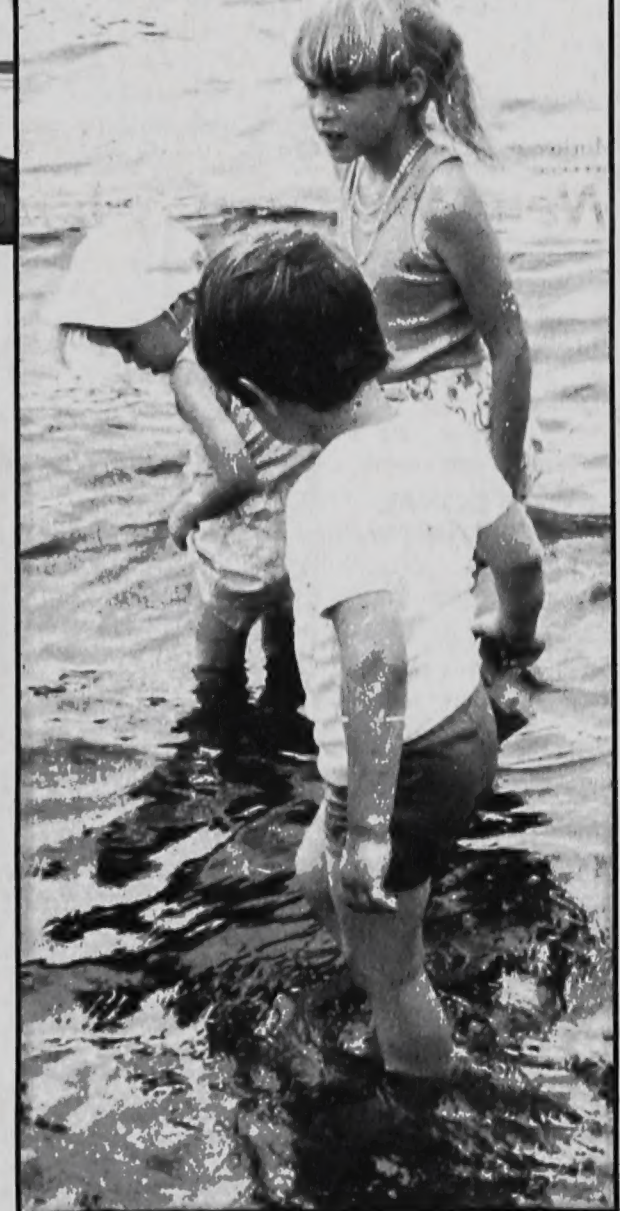

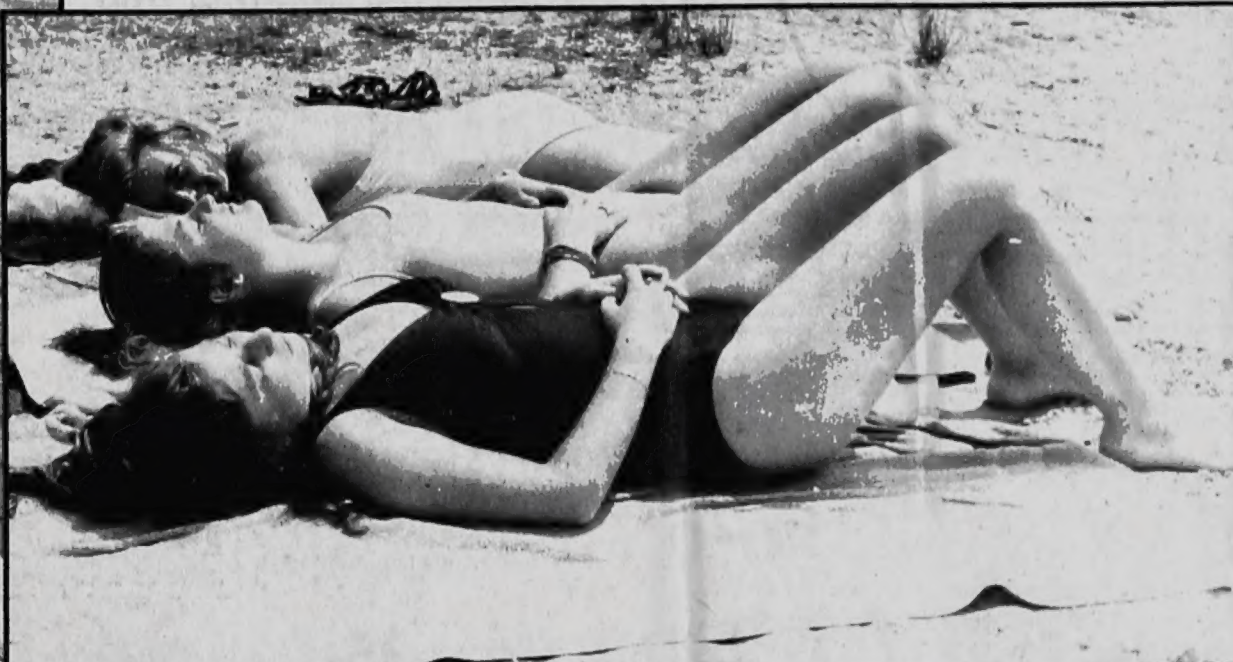

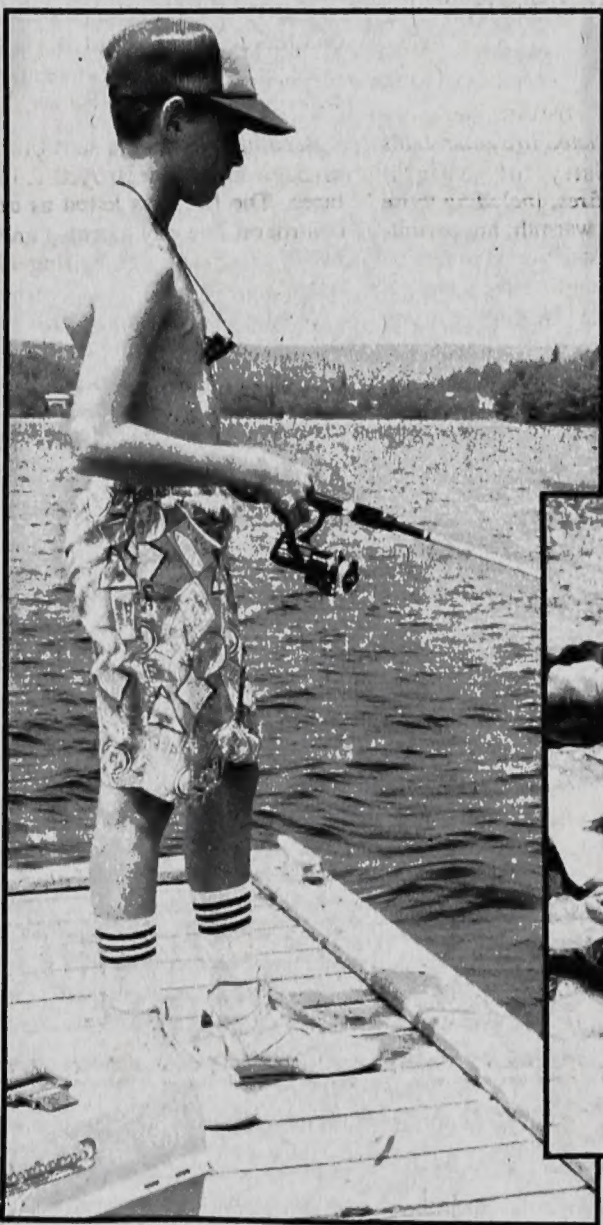

Vacationers weren't the only ones affected by the tropical conditions. Marla MacNaull is one of the supervisors of the Dysart summer program at Head Lake Park and said the heat was getting to the kids. "It's too hot for running," said MacNaull. "We spent the morning doing crafts in the shade and we've got them wading in the water."

According to Minden weather watcher Phil Graham every day between July 2 and Sunday was clear and warm. He said Monday's rainstorm which produced 4.8 millimeters of rain didn't amount to much more than a heavy dew. The previous rainfall on June 28 produced even less, only 1.2 millimeters.

So as long as the weather stays hot, don't sit exposed in the sun for prolonged periods of time, avoid physical exertion, drink plenty of fluids and try to remember how much you complained during the cold snap last February and wished for the summer warmth to arrive.

Risks

There are some among us who thrive on the adrenalin rush that risk and fear bring on. For the thrill of tempting death and surviving, they climb mountains, hurl themselves out of airplanes, round Cape Horn in small boats. These are, for the most part, solitary pursuits, involving calculated risks made manageable by skill, practice, preparation and equipment. Few of us relish such dangers. We are, on the whole, more timid, more concerned with self preservation than with inordinate risk.

Yet each of us stares death in the face each time we travel the highways and backroads of Haliburton County. And never is the danger greater than in the summer months, when the volume of traffic increases dramatically, and aggression and speed on the roadways goes up as fast as the heat. It may not match the high of climbing Everest or the exhilaration of plunging earthward at 150 miles an hour before a parachute cracks open, but for sheer adrenalin pumping terror, a drive around the county on a summer weekend has few equals.

What is that turns otherwise reasonable people into unthinking fools when they get behind the wheel? Is the urge to relax at the cottage so strong that it justifies travelling 70 miles an hour on winding two lane roads to get here? What do people do that is so vitally important with the five minutes they save in a two hour trip by passing cars on curves going uphill? Do the young believe mortality is a myth, that they'll live forever, that only other people die in the twisted wrecks that once were sleek and shiny cars? Or is it that most of us are closet daredevils, and that through cars we experience a brief metamorphosis, from timorous survivor to person of action?

Whatever the reason — and the concern is serious if the questions aren't quite — there are some terrifyingly dangerous drivers on the roads these days. The fatal accident that occurred last Friday night on Highway 118 near Haliburton is graphic evidence of how vulnerable each of us is whenever we drive, but it is more luck than skill that saves any of us from violent death. For no matter how versed one may be in the rules of the road, no matter how much one may want to observe the speed limits, drive defensively, and exercise sober caution, nothing save living the life of a recluse can shield us from the idiots who travel our roadways.

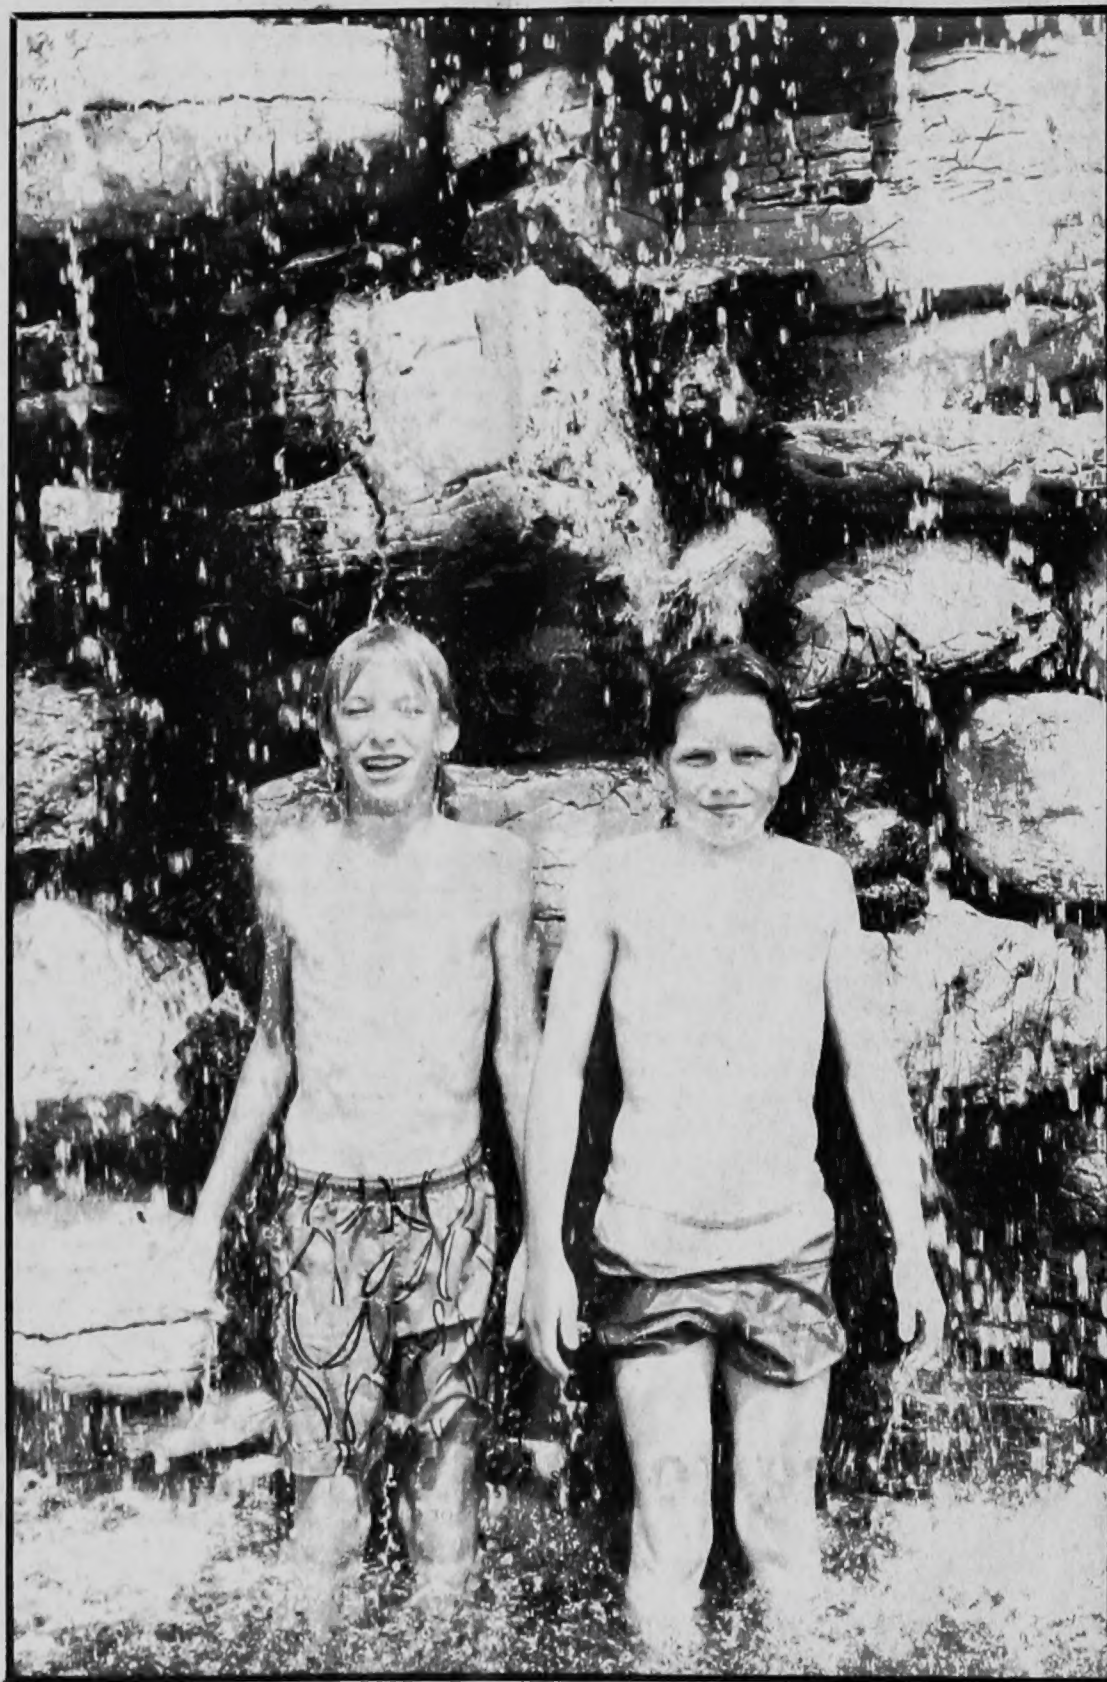

We may feel powerless to do anything about the person who causes the close call, who passes on curves, who drinks or speeds or tailgates, but in truth we are not. Individually we can merely breathe deeply and try to calm our racing hearts when the near miss fades in our rear view mirrors, but as a society, and as people who hold sway over the politicians who claim to serve us, we can take action to reduce the carnage and minimize the risks of death or injury on highways.

We can insist upon and fully support, roadside alcohol testing by police. We can tell politicians we want the driving age raised to at least 18, because while some young people are mature and responsible enough to handle cars at 16, a great many of them are not, as accident statistics and our own experiences tell us clearly. We can also insist upon more stringent enforcement of speed limits, placing more police and more radar equipment on highways and pressing for more severe penalties from the courts.

Perhaps, too, the time has come to make more frequent driving tests mandatory. It is ridiculous that people can get a license to drive at 16 and never have their skills tested again until they are 80. That is a very long period in which to develop the bad habits that can kill or maim in an instant.

The most effective means of hammering some sense into senseless would be to force them to view the shocking reality of highway death. There are graphic films of accident scenes, and their value is that they can put fear where it should be — in the mind of everyone who drives — and keep it there for months or years.

We'll never stop death on the highway as long as there are vehicles to travel them. But that doesn't mean we should avoid the issue. If all of us confronted it head on, the highways would be a great deal safer than they'll be this weekend.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our readers write...

To the Editor:

Re: Letters to the Editor Column dated June 29, 1988.

I am writing to clarify a misunderstanding that may arise for readers as a result of the heading "CAS Assessment Defames Character" in your letters to the editor column dated June 29, 1988. The writers of the letter you printed contended that "The assessment has defamed the character...." not that the Children's Aid Society has done so. The Kawartha Family Court Assessment Service is an independent body which exists to provide the Court, upon a Judge's order, with assessment information relevant to a case before it. As this service is not part of the Kawartha-Haliburton Children's Aid Society, nor any other Children's Aid, I consider it an unfortunate inaccuracy to refer to its assessment as a "CAS assessment".

I would appreciate it if you would include this letter in your next column in order to clarify matters for your reader.

Thank you.

Sincerely yours,

Walk makes day special

To the Editor:

My daughter and I would like to express our thanks to all those Haliburton citizens, particularly to our guide, Mrs. Dobzensky, who made our Canada Day a special one. On a rather chilly Friday morning, we participated in the two hour long Heritage Walk of the Village.

Not only were we impressed by the enthusiasm, involvement and knowledge of so many local "historians" but also by their firm sense of belonging to a continuum of family life in Haliburton. What a contrast to the sometimes transient and 'fast-lane' life in those cities which we, the tourists, call home!

Sincerely,

Helena and Darja Hughes,

More on floodplains

To the Editor:

The following is an open letter to John Eakins, MPP:

As you know the Provincial Government is currently in the process of instituting land use controls regarding floodplain in the Municipalities of Anson, Hindon and Minden and Lutterworth. Although, ostensibly, the Official Plan and Zoning By-law which contain the floodplain provisions must be passed by local council, the pressures brought to bear by the Province in the approval process result in ultimate responsibility being borne by the Province.

It is my understanding that the Provincial Floodplain Policy is currently under review but despite this fact the above noted municipalities are being pressured to pass land use regulations incorporating floodplain provisions.

Originally local councils passed land use regulations showing no floodplain areas along the Gull River. Provincial officials refused to approve these documents, insisting that there were flood prone areas along the river and that these must be identified under Provincial Floodplain Policy. Under the policy the standard for defining flood plain lands is defined as "the higher of:

- 1) the flood resulting from a storm event equal in magnitude to Hurricane Hazel in 1954 or the Timmins storm in 1961.
- 2) the 100 year flood; or
- 3) an observed flood event.

At a public meeting in Minden on May 17, 1988, the planning consultant for Minden agreed that the logic for imposing flood control regulations on the basis of a Regional storm was questionable. It was pointed out that this policy presumes that if a storm of a certain intensity strikes a small area of Ontario, a storm of equal intensity, taking into account no topographical features, will impact directly over every watershed in the Province. That is a completely

WHEN IT COMES TO service clubs you have to take your hat off to the Rotary Club of Haliburton who through the years, have compiled an outstanding record of accomplishments while serving the community. For instance, let's take a look at some of their main accomplishments as a club in the 1987-88 Rotary year. The following summary was compiled by past president Rick Elstone. The club donated $17,000 to the Haliburton Hospital Expansion fund, $650 to the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School for Bursary and Scholarships, $500 to the Happy Gang at Extensicare, $250 to the Senior Games, $300 to Christmas baskets, $7,500 to the Five Counties Childrens Centre in Peterborough, $1020 to the Victoria-Haliburton Summer Camp Fund, $2000 to the Association for children with learning disabilities and $3000 to Camp Illahee for fencing for their tennis courts. The club is also to be congratulated on the fact that they met and exceeded their commitment to Polio Plus Campaign by raising $25,000. During the past year the local Rotary Club raised close to $25,000 from Snowarama and Skiarama. The club was also involved in sending students to foreign countries. Each year the Rotary Club of Haliburton donates thousands of dollars to needy individuals, families, organizations and many other god causes too numerous to mention and none of these has been listed in the above donations. What has been listed is just a small sample of the local club's achievements over the past Rotary Year. The rotary Club would also like to thank you the general public for your help and support in helping out in one way or the other with some of our local projects and also for your financial support in the purchase of car draw tickets and your pledges to such events as Snowarama and Skiarama. The Rotary Club thanks each and everyone of you.

If you are looking for a Bake Sale we would like to inform you that there's one coming up on Thursday July 21 at 10:00 a.m. in front of Cliff Dawson's Insurance office on the main street in Haliburton. It's being sponsored by St. George's Anglican Church.

All roads will be leading to Wilberforce this coming Friday, Saturday and Sunday July 15, 16 and 17 for the Annual Country Good Times weekend. One of the highlights this year will be a visit from the Ontario Sports Travelcade Caravan and OPP Marine Display Trailer. There will be plenty of action and excitement for everyone during this three day event. Plan now to attend.

Country Rose and Shrub in Haliburton, in cooperation with the Haliburton Horticultural Society, were busy last week putting in new flowers and small shrubs in the planter boxes near the Tennis Court at Rotary Beach. This will certainly be an added feature to this area of the Head Lake Park.

Once again this year the 19th annual Ontario Open Fiddle and Step Dance Contests will be held at the Bobcaygeon-Verulam Community Centre. As usual a large part of their audience will come from Haliburton and I understand that many of the local people are making plans now to attend. This year's show will be highlighted by the Mundell Family and John Lester will be the master of ceremonies. Over $5000 in prize awards and the "Ontario Open" Fiddle Champion will receive the Don Messer Trophy and $500.

Dr. Bob Banks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Banks of Haliburton, who is the Doctor for the ever popular Snowbirds based in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan dropped in on his parents when they were least expecting him. On Saturday morning July 2, Dr. Banks had the opportunity to fly one of the Snowbird jet planes over Haliburton when the Snowbirds were putting on a show at nearby Ottawa. When the plane was circling the village of Haliburton I happened to be in my office at the time talking with Phil Graham of Minden who was with the R.C.A.F. during the war. When we went outside and looked up Phil said it was one of the Snowbird Tudor jets and that it was his guess that the pilot knew someone in the village as the plane circled three or four times. Later on in the week Jackie Banks told me that it was her son.

Everyone seems to be talking about the weather these days so I might as well put my nickel's worth in while the subject is on everyone's mind. Last week without a doubt had to be one of the longest and hottest weeks on record and it seemed that it would never come to an end. Day after day we all suffered through this heat wave, finding it hard to sleep at nights. As the Ministry of Natural Resources helicopter flies in and out of its headquarters at Haliburton it's a reminder that unless we get a lot of rain soon we could be in big trouble as we seem to be living on a tinder box.

It seems we just got rid of the tent caterpillars when in moved the moth to take over and cause us some unexpected problems. A woman in town pointed out to me when I walked by her home the other day that they seem to be all over her house and on her driveway. In the evening if the outside lights are on at your home and you look closely you'll see an army of moths.

Indecent descent from good radio

Clarke

LAST WEEK, when I wrote about illiteracy, I commented on the difficulty people can have getting a job without a proper knowledge of English.

Apparently, I should have given some thought to the matter of degree. Some people can read and write, but they really don't know how English works.

Mind you, it doesn't seem to affect their ability to get work these days.

A case in point is the writer behind a new campaign for a major Toronto radio station. Like most of the others, CFRB is going through a transformation, discarding their 50-plus listeners in the hopes of attracting the yuppie crowd, so dearly loved by the advertising agencies.

Looking for a gimmick, they have picked a very logical Toronto.

Based on my last trip down, it would seem that, in the excitement of discovering their horns, most drivers have completely forgotten their turn indicators.

There are other problems of course, some to do with the number and size of trucks, and the deterioration of roads, others to do with professional drivers permit test-takers, who substitute for other immigrants for a fee, leaving us to the mercy of drivers who have never actually taken a test.

Be that as it may, I would give high marks to any campaign that encourages the return of common sense and common courtesy to the roads in and around Toronto...except for this one — it butchers our language.

We will soon see gummy little stickers blossoming on windows of vehicles all over the place with the slogan "Drive Decent."

A good guess would be that the whole campaign has been swiped holus bolus from some big American market. Over there, the nuances of language have long since disappeared.

Still, an adjective is an adjective, and an adverb is an adverb. If they are going to do the decent thing, the least they can do is do it decently.

Somewhat, I just cannot imagine the late Jack Den-nett, who voiced their news for so many years saying "drive decent." I doubt if they could have paid him to say it.

Gordon Sinclair, also no longer with us, used to take great liberties with just about everything, and he did his newscasts in a conversational style — but I think he would have had something to say about the station's current campaign.

Sinclair, being Sinclair, would probably have gone on the air and told his listeners that he was ashamed of what the station was doing, and that — if he referred to the campaign at all in the future — he was simply going to correct it, and ask his listeners to "drive decently."

Betty Kennedy, on the other hand, I think would probably have corrected it as she said it, out of pure and simple good taste. And somehow I don't see it as a phrase that would roll easily from the trained tonsils of a Bob Hesketh, either. Guess these two just got out in time...

Frankly, I cannot imagine someone as intelligent as Allan Slaight, who now owns the outfit, ever saying something as illiterate in conversation — and I've had many with him over the years.

Always a class act, maybe he'll ask the station to clean up theirs and keep his reputation for professionalism intact.

Mind you, radio stations have been guilty of running contests that have more wrong with them than just bad grammar. Gary Dunford reported on three examples of those in the worst taste, a couple of months ago in the Sun. (This is a guy who really knows his bad taste).

A St. Louis station, apparently inspired by the blemish on Premier Gorbachev's forehead, ran a Weird Birthmark Contest during his recent visit to the U.S., with the weirdest ones examined at the station to pick a winner.

The finalist, who claimed a birthmark on his nose turned red when he was sexually excited, won when they showed him photos in 'Penthouse' — and it did.

I won't even discuss the details of a contest on a Texas station that spent $5,000 with an awning manufacturer for a giant bra to promote their contest. Some 300 listeners apparently entered by answering the question: Why I want a breast enlargement operation.

In another clear winner for poor taste, a Tennessee station offered a first-class pre-paid funeral. All you had to do was guess the number of dollar bills in the mahogany coffin they were displaying at intersections around town.

The winner was a lady who wanted it for her married, live-in boyfriend.

While these examples of poor taste certainly represent much lower standards than just bad grammar, I don't think they excuse a top station in a top market in Canada from remembering the rules of our language. They should be setting a good example.

Let's just hope they do the decent thing, and do it soon. But decently, of course.

What's the world evolving to?

SUNNYSIDE UP

Martha Perkins

EVOOLUTION IS ALL around us; we just don't see it because we're too impatient. Accustomed to the obvious, we fail to notice the inconspicuous; wrapped up in our own experiences, we ignore what's happening to the other forms of life sharing our habitat. But have no fear, evolution did not cease its steady creeping towards the future once Darwin "discovered" its presence.

I began to think about evolution when I pondered whether I wanted Canada's seemingly abundant supply of fresh—admittedly some of it may be dead, but still fresh—water to become our next exportable natural resource. We have something like one-quarter of all the world's salt-free water within our borders and until the Trent Severn Waterway starts taking it away from us, we tend to take it for granted. However, be warned—the world is evolving and soon people will be clamouring for water the way they fight over oil and gold.

But this doesn't mean Canada should consider selling it, for even though it seems to be abundant, it is not a renewable resource. We'll take it for granted until we notice it's gone and then it will be too late. Admittedly, it would add money to the federal coffers (can you imagine the haggling over who really owns the water?—now that could slow us down) but if we go for this approach, it will once more prove how impatient we are. With our quick buck in our pockets, we'd soon be bucking to get some of that water back.

Instead, let's let evolution have some leeway. Somewhere, up in the frozen deserts of Canada's north, are a bunch of tree stumps. These are not just ordinary stumps, for given their location, they suggest that Yellowknife might have been the Cote D'Azur of the north—before any humans were around to lie on the beaches of course. But then the continents started drifting, the cold winds arrived, and a once tropical forest became the true north cold and barren.

What if, right now, the mid-west was becoming another Sahara desert, just like the northern jungle became a wasteland. If evolution says this is to be, then it is to be. Had there been farmers or plantation owners up in that jungle before the ice age arrived, their loud cries of woe would not have made one iota of difference.

Now we seem to be under the effect of "the global greenhouse", when all of our industrial gases are keeping our heat close to the source. The world is warming up and if you trust the oldtimers' stories about how much snow there used to be in Haliburton winters, we're in the midst of a phenomenal climatic evolution.

Rather than predict the end of the world, some scientists are saying we're just going to have to adapt to evolution's course. The growing fields of the west will have to be replaced by the growing fields of the north. Populations will shift with the weather and soon, Canada won't be fallaciously known for its dreadfully cold winters. Instead, it will seem as a quite comfortable place to live, with warm, but not unbearable temperatures all year round.

As more people arrive, there will be less need to send our water southward—there'll be enough thirsty Canadians to appease. We may not be able to see this in our lifetime, but a few generations down the line, should we be able to rock our great-great-great-grandchildren on our knees, they'd never believe our "When I was your age..." stories.

Now, as I end this column, I wish I had never begun to think about where evolution is leading us. What will happen to Haliburton, how will its lakes become polluted and spoiled when all those people move north? Are there going to be any corners of peace and solitude left in any part of the world? Actually, I'm glad I won't be around to notice the changes, for I'm not sure whether I would like what course evolution has chosen for us.

Angst of the spirit—and this too shall pass in its own special way

AS OTHERS SEE IT

Bob

MELANCHOLY is hard to describe. It is not like depression, although one sometimes feels kind of down. It is not like loneliness, although one is quietly alone, like in solitude. It is not born of anger, although there is a certain edge of discontent. With melancholy you sigh a lot, think wistful thoughts and are a bit of a puzzle to yourself and friends. You haven't much energy, except to attend your own thoughts, to look around you and see everything with a kind of detachment.

No matter how I tried, I couldn't shake the melancholy of this quiet morning. The streets were empty when I walked Josie. The squirrels were slow in the dampness and we strolled rather than walked. Heavy mist shielded the distance and the sun seemed oppressive like the air. A warm smile from a passing, sweating jogger made me wonder about what life was all about.

Melancholy makes you wonder about your past, about your own particular history. The story that you have tried to tell with your life seems an odd tale of confusion and passions. You look back wondering without feeling much, about the way you

As you can tell from this picture, taken in 1918, Mrs. Otto had a well-deserved reputation for her expertise as a gardener. Our thanks to Lila Austin of Haliburton for the photo and information.

There are bats in the boathouse

DOWN OUR ROAD

Sharon
Lynch

IT WAS JUST AFTER the Second World War. Hank was like so many men who had come through it and lived to tell the tale: a little crazy and full of piss and vinegar to get on with life and all the opportunities out there for the grabbing. Once he got an idea into his head, he wouldn't listen to any doubters, any timid souls. No—he just knew it was a good idea and by God he was going to do it. Confidence. Confidence in life and what just being alive meant with its endless possibilities. Obstacles could be overcome. After all, anyone who had sat in the belly of a plane over Germany or darted shells on the soggy bloody beaches of Europe, heck, they sure could rent a couple of cabins in the summer. Piece of cake.

So Hank and his brother Dick decided to do just that. They went into partnership, bought a nice little 50 acre piece with lots of lakeshore up in the wilds of Haliburton (they were city boys), hired men to build four or five cabins, put some ads in the Toronto Star, told all their friends and went into business. Now there's a lot more to it than that, but that's for another time. Right now let's talk about the very first customer, renter or whatever you want to call him, and how it went.

First of all you have to remember that things were not always as they are now here in the Highlands. If we go back 35 or 40 years, the roads were fewer and rougher, hydro was often a luxury or impossibility and generally life had fewer amenities. When you rented a cabin, you were getting back to nature and away from civilization. Not like today. It was a more rough and ready experience in those days. That's what people expected and that's what they got.

That particular night, the night the first renting holidayers were to arrive, there was a real storm raging. The sky rumbled, lightning flashed over the black water across the other side of the lake and the wind whipped the rain into a pelting stinging frenzy.

Hank and his brother were having a beer or two with a couple of buddies from the war who had arrived right after supper. They had wanted to have a look at the set up and so had dropped in. Time has a way of passing quickly when you're talking about what had happened 'over there', with the odd interruption for a lusty song or two that could as easily bring a tear as a laugh in the remembering.

They were sitting in the bottom part of the boathouse when a bat flew by and up into the upper floor. This was nicely fixed up and was to be rented the following week. Hank had no more time to say, "What the —", when two more bats flew by and up in the same direction. Knowing that they could not tolerate bats in a place soon to be rented, Hank and Pete decided to take care of the situation right then and there. Their friends were not very enthusiastic about the project, so the two brothers left them to their singing and went to work upstairs with brooms. Hank had long given up on the renters for the far white cabin. They were supposed to have arrived hours before. He figured they had either got lost or changed their minds.

Suddenly, amid the banging of brooms and chorus of songs, two beacons broke the stormy gloom there by the side of the lake and a car pulled up by the boathouse. Peering out the upstairs window, Hank said, "Dick, 'They're here. The renters—they made it.' It was 11 o'clock on a Friday night and Mr. and Mrs. Burns, along with their young daughter, had indeed made it over the roads and through the storm. Never under-estimate a Scot.

Hank tore down the boathouse steps, broom in hand, while his pals continued singing their hearts out. Somewhat dishevelled from his encounter with the bats, panting from the run over to the car, he leaned towards the open car window, through which the rain was finding its way with ease and said, "Sorry I couldn't be here sooner, but we were just clearing some bats out of the boathouse."

Mr. Burns looked somewhat taken aback and said, "Shhh, I have my wife here," to which Hank, a bit confused, replied, "Yes, how do you do, but there was a bunch of bats up there and I wanted them out before anyone came to stay."

Mr. Burns continued to look very uncomfortable.

Please turn to page 14

have lived, the constant search for life and the mystery of its allusiveness. There is a kind of homesickness for a place and people whom you haven't met. Your thoughts meander without lingering over anything in particular, just wondering like you did as a kid, about things, people and human striving.

You start to get a little philosophical, maybe poetic but you haven't the energy to really think about anything in particular. So poems don't come, and neither do stimulating ideas. Melancholy is missing the kid in you, the child that you were maybe; the carefree, spontaneous child. You sigh again, remembering how beautiful spring looked and smelled when you were a kid. Today you see it and smell it and feel it, but you are removed from it, don't experience it. It is there, so are you, but you don't connect.

Actually, you don't connect with the nostalgia either, the memories are there, pictures of the street where you grew up and the friends you shared the mystery of living with, but remembering too is an act of detachment. The memories don't touch your heart or spirit.

Melancholy comes and goes without any particular reason. Nothing in particular seems to have started it, unless it was the dreams of the night which today cannot be recalled. Nothing in particular lifts the mood, unless it is deciding to let it go. That's part of its ghostly presence though, it's a kind of friend that you don't want disturbed, you don't want it to go away until you have rested in it to the full.

I think that the mood of contemplation that monks and praying nuns speak of is close to the gift of melancholy. There is a tone of religiosity in it. Not altogether healthy religion, but a sense of the transcendent or something like that. It is a kind of wistful longing for Someone or something. Sort of wishing you could pray or talk to God, but you can't do anything but quietly listen to the world around you.

You are quickly and easily irritated by the sounds of machines, of senseless clutter. The stillness seems important to maintain. Children playing and laughing don't bother you because somehow that is a part of the cloud you are in and they seem far away anyway.

Melancholy is longing for change, for renewed direction, starting the search in another way, encountering the end of some spiritual journey and being finished with it. It is a time of getting ready, it would seem, quietly, to let go of what has been, looking for what might be. You feel like you are being changed as the mood lets you rest and at the same time beckons you to seek in it the meaning or truth that it will reveal.

Below the melancholy lurks momentary joy, fleeting, mixed with some gentle tears that will neither flow nor go away. No particular feeling of joy or sorrow is strong or lasting enough to have full sway in your contemplative time.

So it seems that all one can do is befriend the melancholy spirit, walk quietly in it and await its truth or its departure. It's just one of those spirits that belong to being human. Life is never quite as shallow again, but lived more deeply after melancholy's visit.

Minden Hustlers win big in Harcourt

by JAY KERR-WILSON
Staff Reporter

The Minden Rockcliffe Hustlers came out the big winners in this year's Grenville Martin Memorial Softball tournament in Harcourt and Minden pitcher Jack Snell was named the tournament's most valuable player.

Minden beat the Bellville Doctors in the final game on Sunday afternoon by a score of 7-4 and earned $600 for their efforts. Minden was down 3-0 at one point but came back to win late in the game.

The Hustlers beat Quinte 2-1, Maynooth 5-0, and Uxbridge 1-0 to advance to the 'A' group finals.

The Haliburton Warriors didn't do so well. They lost their first game to Maynooth 5-4 dropping them into the 'B' group. Haliburton was eliminated when they lost to Quinte by a score of 3-2.

Quinte led off the scoring with a single shot home run to make it 1-0. The Warriors tied it up in the fourth inning and took the lead in the top of the fifth when Erin Nicholls answered with a solo home run of his own. Haliburton staved off a Quinte rally in the bottom of the sixth when first baseman John Ballantyne caught a two out fly ball in foul territory with the bases loaded. But the Warriors couldn't score the runs they needed in their half of the seventh inning and Quinte came out swinging on their last at bats to score the winning run.

Quinte went on to beat Bracebridge 6-2 in the 'B' group final and took home $350.

This was the 16th year for the tournament, named for the owner of Martin Lumber who died in a plane crash. Tournament organizer Mac Gadway says Martin was very supportive of softball in Harcourt and donated the land that the ball diamond is built on.

On a happier note for Warrior fans, Haliburton beat Town Rent All in Lindsay by a score of 6-0 on Sunday in regular league play.

Warrior pitcher Steve Lustig denied Lindsay any runs over five innings and then Erin Nicholls took the mound in relief and completed the shut-out.

Haliburton has now won four of its last five league games.

The Warriors next game is at home against Kent Tavern Thursday night at 8:00.

Two golfers hit hole-in-one

David Warrington of Thornhill scored a hole-in-one on the eleventh hole at PineStone on June 21, witnessed by Ed Storz.

On July 3 Bob Gain of Kingston scored a hole-in-one on the same hole. Both players used five irons. Gain's perfect shot was witnessed by Elaine Gain, Walter and Tora Garrett.

Orillia forfeits first spot

by MIKE PARK
Staff reporter

The Haliburton Soccer Club is in first place in the Muskoka District Soccer League. But they didn't win that honour the way they wanted to. The Orillia Centennials failed to show and Haliburton won by forfeit.

Haliburton's team representative Brian Moore says

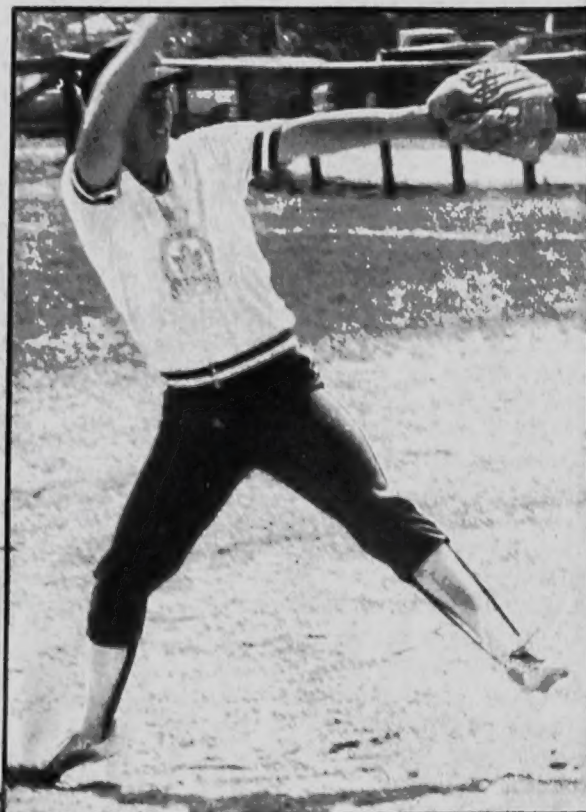

Orillia could only get seven players together for the game and had to relinquish their first place standing. Moore says many of the players were injured and away, but a few of them just didn't want to play in Sunday's tremendous heat.

Officially, the game will go into the books as a 2-0 win for Haliburton. Most players, however, would rather have actually played the game.

Haliburton's next game is an away engagement against Midland this Sunday.

The Warriors were short-staffed at last weekend's tournament in Harcourt. Several players were away with the crews fighting forest fires in Northern Ontario

It was effort like this that allowed Quinte to slide into first place in the B group

Local cyclist shoots for the big time

by MIKE PARK
Staff reporter

HE CAN BE SEEN on almost any day as long as it's not too hot. Pumping his bike along highway 121 between Minden and Haliburton at lunch time is Matt Creelman, the Kodak Courier.

Creelman is a local high-school student who works at The Sports Stop in Haliburton. He is currently in training, hoping to move up to provincial-level competition in bike racing. And as a part of that training he is the Kodak Courier, shuttling films and prints between Minden and Haliburton for Perfect Prints Photofinishing. He uses his lunch hour at the Sports Stop to do the riding for the photo shop.

Creelman says riding for the store is a great way to add miles to his road work.

"My goal is riding over 300 km per week," he says.

As part of his courier job, he rides to Minden with finished prints and drops them off at the I.D.A. Drugs and the Value Mart. While he's there, he picks up undeveloped film and returns to Haliburton so they can be processed. It's 50 km round trip, and he says he can do it three to four days out of the week. He says the ride itself takes about an hour and a half, round trip.

But that's not all he's doing.

Last week he rode with the Peterborough Cycling Club in a practice race the club was holding.

Though he finished fifth out of five racers, the club asked him back for another practice and Creelman himself was quite happy with his time. He says he could have ridden faster but he was on an unfamiliar course and it was a bit windy the day of the practice. It was also his first time actually racing against other cyclists.

He would like to become a member of the club because he could then get good coaching and training and compete at a provincial level.

An element of adventure

Creelman began cycling about three years ago. He says he's drawn to the sport because it is much different and better than just running.

"There's a little more adventure," he explains, "you can go farther (than just running)."

Haliburton trounces Guilford, 9-4

by MIKE PARK
Staff reporter

The whole team showed up this week and that made the difference for the Haliburton Ladies Softball team. They managed to beat West Guilford 9-4.

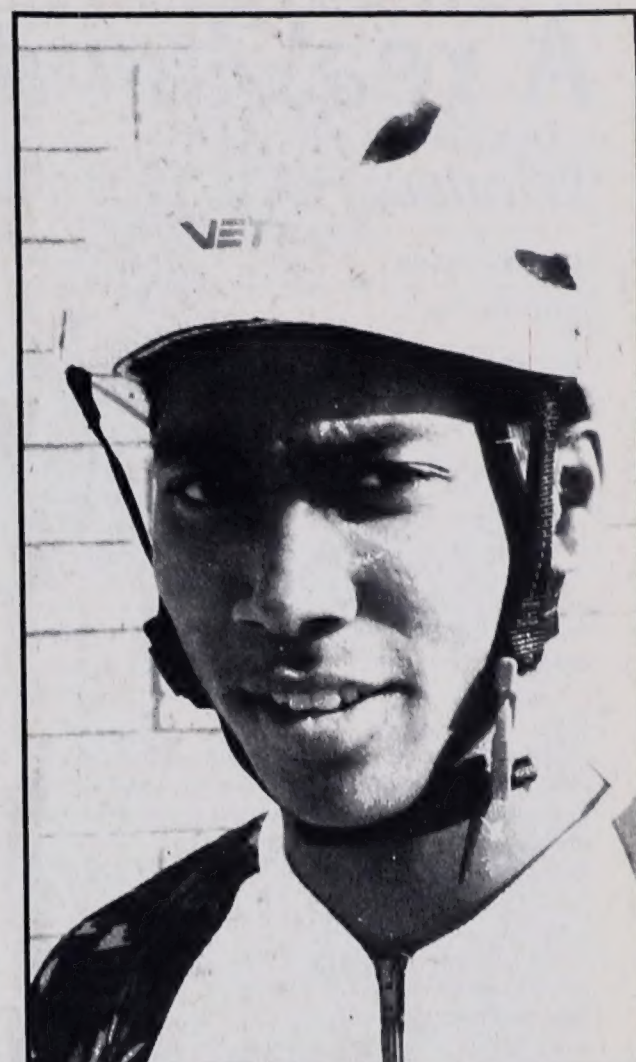

Don't let the score deceive you, the game was a lot closer than it indicates. Haliburton won because they scored six runs in the first inning, compared to West Guilford's two.

His training consists of three day riding and one day off then back to riding. He also tries to get about 300 km of riding in a week. He hopes he can continue to get better, so he can do well if he gets to the competitive level.

Creelman explains that a rider reaches his peak performance abilities in his mid-twenties. This means that, in the back of his mind, he hopes that he may get good enough to represent Canada at the 1996 Olympic Games. He says it is a dream every cyclist has.

The only problem Creelman has encountered is time. He works from 9:00 a.m. until 6:00 p.m. at the Sports Stop and thus only has the evenings for his training. But he says he will find a way to keep on going so that he just might get to the Olympics.

"All I have to do," he says, "is find the time and ride."

Courier Matt Creelman

Strong hitting, like this smash from Michelle Harrison, helped the Haliburton Ladies softball team jump out to a 6-2 lead after the first inning on Monday. West Guilford couldn't make up the runs

Lots of homers in minor softball

The Bantams had a good night at the plate in minor softball action last week. Home runs were hit by Paul Vandersluis, four by Marty Farrier and three by Jeff Gayman. Tim Keefer also had one.

The Atoms group had a good game also, tying their game at 24 runs each. Robert Andrus hit a home run for the Brohm's Variety team and Tim Stouffer hit two home runs for the Bishop and Wilson team.

HAVING FUN for profit. Does it sound too good to be true? Not for Eoin and Erin Finn. They have parlayed their passion for windsurfing into one of Haliburton's most popular and successful business, Wind-Sur-Finn.

Erin began windsurfing in France when she was 14 and got so good that she began teaching it when she was 17. Eoin began to pick it up almost immediately, because of his previous experience in ski racing. They both just fell in love with the sport, especially Eoin.

"I just got on the board and picked it up," says Eoin.

Erin got the idea of opening a store while at boarding school in Toronto. She toured various stores in Toronto to get an idea of what was involved and on February 14, 1985, they opened Wind-Sur-Finn as a seasonal beach store at the present site of Maple Lane Antiques. Erin had just finished grade 13 and Eoin was still in school.

Their mother, Carole Finn, says jokingly that they really had no idea what they were getting themselves into. She says there was a lot of stress and a lot of work involved and it just about did them in.

After two years, they decided to move because the old location was too far out of town and Erin says people had to make an effort to go to see them. They moved into the store at the corner of Highland and Cedar streets where Perfect Prints is now. Erin says that was a real learning experience. They had to find new distributors and merchandise because their old one, Windsport, went out of business. That's also when the store started into year-round operations by stocking a line of winter clothing.

The store moved to its present location on May 3rd of this year after what Carole calls the quickest and most hectic move they ever had.

"We were awake all week," she says.

Both Erin and Eoin are certified instructors and know the windsurfing business pretty well after three years. In fact, Eoin picks up the sport so well, he was able to get his level one and level two instruction certificates in the same week. Usually it takes about a year.

While Erin likes the sport and is a little more business minded, Eoin is the consummate windsurfer of the family. Through Wind-Sur-Finn he has travelled to such exotic windsurfing capitals as the Canary Islands, California, the Caribbean, and Germany. He's also tripped all over Canada with his board and sail to Georgian Bay, Lake Ontario and Lake Simcoe.

They say the secret to the store's success is the Finn's personalized service. Mother Carole says because they are young and interested in the sport, they are more knowledgeable and can help the customer better. Customers are also more likely to believe them than a 40-year-old salesman whose obviously never surfed, she adds.

Erin says their store also tackles the main problem of the industry head on. She says the industry caters almost exclusively to the established, semi-professionals who have been in the sport for a long time. She says there is almost nothing for the beginner. But she says Wind-Sur-Finn is different because they are willing to spend money cultivating that beginners market. She says they will eventually become the semi-professional and Wind-Sur-Finn will have a core of steady customers. That's why they run their four summer regattas at a loss and host special clinics and give lessons. They are, in a sense, creating their market for the future.

They also stand behind their products.

"What ever we sell, we sail on," says Eoin.

He says everyone who comes into the store is treated individually and, in most cases, becomes friends.

That kind of business sense appears to be paying off. They have already doubled last summer's profits so far this year. Eoin says they made more on the Canada Day weekend this year than they did in the entire month of June last year.

"It's nice to see something grow like this," says Erin.

Carole says the store is really four stores in one, though Eoin quips that "it feels like 20." They have a discount store and the main store, the windsurfing school and sailboard rentals. Eoin is in charge of the windsurfing department, Erin and Emma Postlethwaite run the school and Carole runs the stores.

They all say the future looks bright for the store because of the immense popularity windsurfing is beginning to experience. Eoin says in Germany the situation has gotten so bad that windsurfers are licensed and you can only surf on an odd day if your windsurfer licence ends in an odd number, and vice versa. When the World Cup was held there, there were over 150,000 spectators, he says, more than at the Super Bowl.

"One day," claims Eoin, "windsurfing will be as big as skiing."

At left, Eoin Finn teaches a lesson at Windsur-FINN's beach on Head Lake. But lessons are only a small part of the family business. The store on the main street sells clothes, boards and other surfing accessories. There's also a discount store

OPP warns of travelling thieves

Peterborough OPP have reported a series of thefts involving persons travelling through out the province.

The report says that in most cases a female will enter a business establishment and ask for change for a large bill, then two accomplices will stage some sort of diversion and in the confusion the female leaves with the change for the bill and the bill itself. When dealing with residences, the female will divert the occupant by asking for directions of asking to use the telephone while accomplices search the residence for jewelry and cash.

The OPP report that these persons do not remain in a given area and request that all businesses and residents be especially vigilant concerning these activities making note of the descriptions of persons, vehicles and licence numbers.

Inspiration plus knowledge equals wildlife art

Allan Sakhavars shows how to 'capture' nature

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

WHEN YOU'RE IN the Highlands, it's only natural that you should be awed by the beauty of Nature. And when you're a fine arts school in the Highlands, it's only natural that Allan Sakhavars should be invited to teach Wildlife Drawing.

Last week at Sir Sandford's School of Fine Arts, this painter and sketcher helped his students learn the techniques of capturing the Highlands' animal life on paper. While their subjects, such as the marten, lynx and eagle, sat stuffed on tables, any drive to the classroom was sure to provide them with the inspiration to make these models come to life.

"People know that sooner or later we're going to lose all these beautiful things," whether because of pollution, expansion or ignorance, Sakhavars says. Not only has this resulted in a new appreciation for wildlife on the part of artists, but it has also created a lucrative market of people wanting to buy their works.

Most of the time, his students at the school and at his studio in Mississauga already have a firm grasp on drawing and painting techniques. But for some reason, their interests have shifted away from portraits and landscapes to the animal world. With that spark of interest, Sakhavars hopes to give them the knowledge they need to make their latent talent ignite.

"You show people the way," he says of his role. "The basic duty is to generate that hunger and then I've done my job." If the flame really catches, the students will continue with their art long after the classes end.

Anatomy lessons to begin with

The first step is to learn more about animal anatomy and habitat. Sakhavars is not of the "natural history" bent, which was given life by John James Audubon and countless other precisionists since then. He prefers capturing the mood of the animal's surroundings but accepts he can only do this if he too knows how many vertebrae a cougar's back has, or how a duck's feathers are structured in layers. From knowledge is born inspiration.

"This is wildlife art but wildlife doesn't mean you're just dealing with animals. I paint to convey the overall picture. The branch is as important as the bird."

If a bird is to be in his painting, then his primary aim is not to paint a picture of a bird, for that would take away a lot of his own interpretation of what that bird looks like, perhaps when he's out in a walk in a game reserve, or simply looking out his window. "As far as being an artist is concerned, you express your feelings. This is the way I express my feelings towards these creatures."

However, at the same time, "I have to do a lot of research. It's important to pay attention to detail because the paintings should be accurate. There's no way out of it. (Luckily), the more I study and do research, the more I am interested in them."

He'll start by drawing a "thumbnail" portrait of the animal on onion paper, setting it in different surroundings and in different poses. By the time he narrows down which one he likes the best, he may have to choose from 10 to 20 sketches.

In today's crowded market of wildlife paintings, it is easy for one artist's work to look similar to another's. This is unavoidable when everyone chooses the same subject, but it doesn't necessarily mean the final products have to look the same.

"Just close your eyes at the first stage and trust

'Just close your eyes at the first stage and trust your feelings,' Allan Sakhavars advises his students, including Audrey Hawthorn. 'If this is your true feeling, there's no way two people could have the same feeling towards one subject' your feelings," Sakhavars suggests. "If this is your true feeling, there's no way two people could have the same feeling towards one subject." He and a friend have gone to the same marsh, and painted the same bird, but when you look at the two paintings, they are totally different in composition and mood. "They're never the same if you're trusting your own abilities and feelings."

Once he's chosen his favourite sketch, which may take a couple of months in between working on other paintings, he will blow it up into different sizes using a projector. "What proportion is the best? Sometimes two or three inches makes a big difference."

Art versus eating

Sakhavars also knows he has to please his public. "There's a very thin line between following the market and doing something you feel is really good." But artists have to eat too, and some compromises must be made. He may decide a painting looks best 10 feet high, but who's going to buy it?

One could also say Sakhavars has been very lucky or unfortunate to have most of his works done on commission. The good side is he can afford a certain level of security, knowing his painting will be sold. The drawback is the purchaser's expectations, whether it is something as simple as whether a painting will be horizontal or vertical.

"I would love not to be under any limitations but this is my job and I have to sell my paintings."

In the past years, buyers have become far more aware about the value of wildlife art. Before, pictures of animals and birds were done by a hunter's perspective—ducks flying out of a marsh in perfect firing range, or a deer caught in surprise in some quiet corner of the woods. Now pictures are done from a naturalists point of view and people's knowledge about wildlife and habitat has greatly increased.

The pressures of the studio can be quite intense, and for this reason, Sakhavars appreciates the time he can spend teaching in Haliburton. "First of all, it's a very friendly atmosphere." Some of his students have become friends and have stayed in contact with him long after the course is finished. Artwork can be a solitary endeavour and he enjoys these chances to be among other artists.

"I like the atmosphere here," says one of his enthusiastic students, Audrey Hawthorn of St. Catharines, who stayed at her sketch pad during the lunch break. She is a fine arts graduate, but when she tried to put a few sheep into her paintings, they simply didn't look like sheep.

"It's helping me tremendously," she says of the course. "It will be a new interest in life."

One wonders how anyone cannot become interested in wildlife when you know just outside the school's classroom doors, some of those stuffed animals come to life in the woods of Haliburton.

Summer show/sale is a 'smash hit'

GUILD NOTES

by Shirley Hodgson

AFTER WEEKS, and in some cases months, of preparation the big night had finally arrived—July 8—the opening of this year's Summer Sale and Show. I'm sure that everyone will agree that this year the wonderful display of articles was beautifully prepared. Under the careful direction and management of Cecile and Alex McLeod and the artistic convenor, Claire MacLeod, this year's show proved to be a "smash hit". It has been a challenge for everyone involved and a credit to the community. This sale is the Guild's major economic attraction and congratulations to the leaders and, of course, all the many, many volunteers. Without their help the show would not be the success that it is.

The Guild Choir performed with its usual perfection and its music was enjoyed by all. Congratulations Marilyn Stouffer and all members of the Choir.

This year's guest speaker was Walter Sunahara,

OPP R.I.D.E. nabs drinking drivers

In the Courts

Criminal cases heard in Minden before Provincial Court Judge G.F. Inrig and presented by Crown Attorney Rita Koehl and defense counsels Dennis Lowry and Ted Gardiner on July 6, 1988.

Impaired Driving

Kelly J. Knapton of Scarborough pleaded guilty to an impaired driving charge laid on June 12. Knapton was driving south on Main Street in the village of Minden at 1:30 a.m. when OPP officers noticed his driving to be erratic. They pulled Knapton over on Highway 35 where he failed the Alert test. Subsequent breathalyzer tests showed that Knapton had three times the legal limit of alcohol in his blood. He was given a fine of $800 and had his license suspended for one year.

Andre La Pointe of Woodbridge pleaded guilty to operating a motor vehicle while having a blood alcohol level exceeding .08 per cent. La Pointe was in Minden on June 11 participating in the Ride for Sight. He was pulled over on Bobcaygeon Road as part of an OPP RIDE check point. He failed the Alert and a breathalyzer test revealed an alcohol level of .143 per cent. He was fined $300 and had his license suspended for one year.

Frank J. McDonald of Pickering was also in Minden on June 11 for the Ride for Sight and was pulled over by the OPP RIDE team on Bobcaygeon Road. McDonald's breathalyzer test indicated a alcohol level of .216 per cent. He pleaded guilty and was fined $750 and had his licence suspended for one year.

Possession of narcotics and stolen property

Glen Reid pleaded guilty to possession of a vial of hashish oil, a stolen quilt and a stolen clock/radio. Reid was charged on February 13 when a search warrant was executed on his residence. Police found the drugs and property which had been stolen from cottages on or about January 5. The court determined that although Reid knew the property was stolen he had not participated in the theft. He was fined $250 for the possession of the narcotics and $500 for the possession of the stolen property and was placed on probation for one year.

Possession of narcotics

Stephen MacInnis of Oshawa pleaded guilty to, and was convicted of possession of hashish oil. MacInnis was parked with some friends at the Minden scenic lookout when the police approached because there were liquor infractions in progress. Police found MacInnis to be in possession of a one gram vial of hashish oil and some rolling papers. He was given a fine of $100.

Assault

Alice Martin pleaded guilty to assault in connection with an incident that occurred on April 11, in Eagle Lake. The victim, Sharon Sisson, was walking with her 3-year-old son, and as she approached Martin's home, Martin ran down her driveway and struck Sisson with her open hand. Martin then grabbed Sisson by the hair and kned her in the head. Judge Inrig asked Martin what the reason for the attack was and Martin said she had been harassed by her neighbours. "I was told people in Guilford don't like outsiders and have ways of making them move," Martin told the court. She said her children, one of whom is blind, had been abused by neighbours and this is what prompted the assault against Sisson. Martin said she has subsequently sold her house and moved to Mississauga. Judge Inrig decided to order a pre-sentence report. Martin will be sentenced on Sept. 7.

Possession with intent to traffic

Wayne Berlinghoff pleaded guilty and was convicted of possession of a marijuana derivative with intent to traffic. Burlinghoff was arrested on April 28 after police executed a search warrant on his residence and found six vials of hashish oil. Burlinghoff is scheduled to be sentenced in Lindsay on Aug. 11.

Dangerous Driving

More evidence was heard in the trial of Darren Stamp who is charged with dangerous driving. The trial began on June 8, when Scott McKee testified that a grey Pontiac Parisienne identical in make and colour to Stamp's car, rammed him several times from behind while he was driving on Pine Street, and after he had turned into the United Church in Haliburton, on July 24, 1987.

Last Wednesday the court heard from Jim Churko who was a passenger in McKee's car at the time of the incident. His testimony supported McKee's version of the events. Churko also testified that about a week and a half after the incident he saw the accused, Darren Stamp getting out of a car identical to the one that had rammed them. Churko said Stamp's appearance resembled the appearance of the driver who had chased them.

The officer who investigated the incident, OPP Constable Connolly said he inspected both cars the morning after the incident and found damage to the back of McKee's LTD and to the front of Stamp's Pontiac.

The court also heard testimony from Ronald Gamble who sold the car to Stamp and Gus MacInnis, the mechanic who certified the Pontiac, that there was no damage to the front of the Pontiac when Stamp bought it.

Stamp took the stand and said that although he was in the area of Pine and Highland the night the incident occurred, he was not involved and had not hit any other cars. He said that the car was rusted and dented when he bought it. The court was told that Stamp has been convicted of auto theft and impaired driving and that both offenses occurred when he did not have a driver's license.

The trial is scheduled to continue on September 7 when the lawyers will be asked to make submissions providing there are no further witnesses to be called.

Rubies were thought to contain a glowing spark struck from the planet Mars. Its significance is contentment and peace. Rubies are found in Burma, not far from Rudyard Kipling's Mandalay, and also in Ceylon and Siam.

Tragic death doesn't need to be the end of life

by MIKE PARK

Staff Reporter

SEPTEMBER 29, 1987 is a date that "Jane" will never forget.

She is a local resident who asked not to be named. On that cold and rainy night, her 20-year-old son was killed in a motorcycle accident.

Even after eight months, "Jane" still gets a little distant when she talks about that night. Visibly fighting her emotions, she tells how her son was driving home to get his bathing suit to go swimming with his friends when he lost control of his bike. It was on a curve in highway 35 near Carnarvon. She says he wiped out on the side of the road and hit the guard rail. Though he had broken bones, no one at the scene expected him to die.

He was still talking in the ambulance on the way to Minden Hospital, telling the OPP constable riding with him to let him out because he couldn't breathe.

When "Jane" and her family arrived, he was already dead. The force of the crash and a broken rib had burst his lungs and he had suffocated before he arrived at the hospital.

After they were told the bad news, the doctor simply said "I'll call the morgue."

And that upset "Jane" even more.

Here, she says, was her perfectly healthy boy dead. Being a nurse, she knows the importance of donated organs and wanted her son's good organs to be used to save another person.

"If you can give someone else life, why not," she argues.

She says her family would have been able to mourn in greater comfort knowing that, despite their tragedy, someone else would be able to live, thanks to their son's gift. But it was not to be.

The hospital, in her eyes, never lifted a finger to get her son's good organs. His death is now a total waste, as far as she is concerned. And to this day she still resents the hospital for "not even trying."

"Jane's" tragic story shows just how much misperception people, even in the medical profession, have about organ donation and retrieval.

Marlene Bennett, the Nurse Administrator at Haliburton Hospital, points out that very few accident victims meet the very strict criteria to be organ donors. She says the public thinks that every accident victim has the possibility of being an organ donor but that simply isn't true.

The very first consideration, she explains, is the condition of the accident victim. In order to donate organs, the victim must be brain dead, his heart must still be beating and the internal organs must be in good shape. Bennett says this narrows down the

'If you can give someone else life, why not,' asks a grieving mother who wanted her dead son's organs to be used for transplants. But she, like most others, didn't understand that not every accident victim is eligible for donations. A good donor is actually very rare, as Haliburton Hospital administrator Marlene Bennett explains. There are only 150 suitable donors each year in Ontario number of victims to those with severe head injuries or other traumas and situations that kill the brain but leave the body intact and the heart beating, such as brain tumors, drownings or suicides. She explains that if the heart is not beating, the needed organs will die while they are still in the body.

Bennett says the next step is to determine the previous health of the person. A donor, she says, must be young and have no pre-existing diseases, such as cancer or heart disease. A heart of a person over the age of 50, for instance, cannot be used.

The donor must also be "willing" to donate. This means they must have signed their drivers licence organ donor card of have their next of kin consent to donate, she says.

Sometimes this can be the biggest stumbling block, even with the perfect donor. In an impromptu street survey conducted by the Echo on June 16, on Highland Street in Haliburton, nearly two-thirds of those asked had not signed their licence donor card. The vast majority of those who responded said they hadn't signed it because they simply never thought of it or just hadn't got around to it. Most people said they agreed with the idea in principle but were a little uneasy when they actually thought about it. One respondent seemed to sum up everyone's general attitude.

"At an intellectual level, everyone would sign it (the donor card)," he says, "but at an emotional level, some people are squeamish."

Bennett goes on to say that a signed donor card doesn't guarantee the organs can be retrieved. The hospital must still get the permission of the next of kin. Sometimes that in itself can eliminate a potential donor, because grieving relatives don't want a family member "cut up."

As a result of these strict guidelines, suitable organ donors are very rare. Bennett says "Jane's" son could not be used because his heart was not beating and his body could not be kept alive. Robert Smith, the Chief Transplant Co-ordinator for the province's Multiple Organ Retrieval and Exchange program, or MORE, says that on average there are only 150 accident victims who become organ donors every year across the province. He says when this is compared to the nearly 300 people waiting for kidney transplants and the 150 people waiting for other organs every year, one can really see how rare the donors are and how vitally they are needed.

The two other main obstacles to organ retrieval are the lack of proper facilities and transportation. There are only seven transplant and retrieval centres in Ontario: Kingston, Ottawa, London and four in Toronto. And in order for the transplant to take place, the donor's entire body must kept alive and be taken to the nearest centre as soon as possible.

Haliburton Hospital has the facilities to keep a donor "alive" and an air ambulance to transport them to a centre, says Bennett. The Minden OPP reports they investigated only five fatal accidents in the county in 1987. With so few fatal accidents, and such a small chance a victim in such an accident would be a suitable donor, Bennett says Haliburton Hospital has never had an organ donor. The Administrator at Minden Hospital says that hospital hasn't the facilities or transportation required to effectively help in organ retrieval.

The Hospital itself has very little to do with retrieval except to determine if a victim is eligible. Once that has happened, MORE sends a recovery team to the hospital to keep the donor alive and escort the body to the transplant centre. Bennett says her doctors have a step by step plan to determine if an accident victim is a potential donor, should the situation ever arise. So far, she says, it hasn't.

The MORE program was begun in 1976 by two doctors at Toronto General Hospital. At first it concentrated on retrieving and transplanting kidneys but by 1979 had taken over that function for all vital organs. Despite what may seem like impossible odds, the program has successfully made over 3000 organ transplants.

"Jane" could not find comfort in the hope that organ retrieval holds for many on the waiting lists. She still favours the program. She says it can make a person feel that a life was not totally wasted in a tragic accident if some small part of him could somehow allow another person to live. Many people who sign their driver's licence donor cards agree. They say the beautiful irony of the program is that a tragic death doesn't have to mean the end of one person's life, but the beginning of another's.

'Fakes and forgeries' coming to Rails' End

Senior Association Community Arts Officer of the Ontario Arts Council. He was a most interesting speaker and he seemed to be thoroughly enjoying every moment he had to spend with us.

Just a note of thanks to Chris Postlewaite for arranging the most beautiful flowers that were on the stage. She had done this faithfully for many years and she most certainly does deserve a few words of appreciation. Thank you, Chris.

Congratulations to all the winners in this year's show. There are 115 exhibitors in this year's show and I'm sure everyone will agree that it must have been difficult for the judges to come up with the winners.

Here is a quote from the notes of Wendy Bateman, who incidentally, won numerous prizes at this year's show and as one of 60 participants in the "Wyoming Fibre Affair Conference", she was presented with "The Best in the Show Award". Congratulations, Wendy.

This is the quote: "The one talent we are given each day EQUALLY IS TIME". The artists involved in this year's show most certainly made full use of their time and talents.

Now, be sure to see the display of miniatures at the Rails' End Gallery from July 1 to August 1. Miniatures is a mixed media of art created by the faculty members of the Haliburton School of Fine Arts.

Have you noticed the sculptures in the park near the Gallery? This is titled "From the Ground Up" (from July 1 to September 3). This outdoor sculpture was arranged through the Art Gallery of Ontario. Tom Benner installed seven musk ox while Reinhard Reitzenstein created on-site sculpture by using trees and the railway tracks.

Please note that "Fakes and Forgeries" Lecture, with speaker David Westaw from the Art Gallery of Ontario is on Wednesday July 13 at 7:30 p.m. at the Rails' End Gallery. Don't be duped. Fakes and Forgeries infiltrate the Art World.

Arts and craft shoppers filled the school gym last Friday night at the sale's official opening

Please note also that the Summer Film Festival at the Rails' End Gallery will be screening a wide variety of films during the summer. On Wednesday July 20, Margaret Lawrence "First Lady of Manawaka" and "A Bird in the House"; and on Wednesday July 27, Emily Carr, "Growing Pains" and "Little Old Lady on the Edge of Nowhere."

Welcome to Amber Woods from London, Ontario, who is the young lady assisting at the Gallery this summer. Good Luck and we hope you enjoy your stay in Haliburton.

First renters' first night

until it finally dawned on Hank that Mr. Burns had thought he was referring to something very different from the tiny winged night flyers.

Having clarified all this, Hank and his wife Pat loaded the Burns family and their suitcases into the rowboat for the trip over to the little white cabin across the bay. The road that now goes to this spot was not even on the drawing board in those days. Through wet eyelashes, Pat took another look at the sky and the churning water and the Burns' 3 year old daughter, and gazed pointedly at her husband.

"Oh it'll be fine, just fine. It's only a short row over Mr. Burns and Pat and I will see that you're well settled in before we leave you." Confidence.

It was a wet and bumpy ride, but they made it across the bay. Pat held the child, Mr. Burns held Mrs. Burns' hand and Hank manned the oars. When they opened the door to the cabin, Pat's heart swelled with pride. It looked so nice and cozy. Also dry. Just before supper, Hank had lit the kerosene heater and once the lamp was lit, it showed the daisies in a jar Pat had placed on the kitchen table that afternoon. Everything was neat and swept, with curtains Pat had made herself. Proudly Hank showed the Burns how with a downward movement of their hand they had running water.

"Not like some places where you have to bring it up from the lake in a pail," he pointed out. That afternoon he had gone around and pumped all the old empty oil drums full of lake water so each cabin had a few days supply on tap. His arms were still a bit sore from the up, down, up, down of the hand

pump, but it was worth it

The Burns were delighted and with a touch of burr, in his voice, Mr. Burns announced that the first thing they were going to do was make a wee pot of tea. He filled the kettle with water and Hank and Pat left them in high spirits, Mrs. Burns bustling around getting out mugs and tea bags.

The next day was a beauty, the rain was finished and the morning bloomed blue-skied and sunny. Unable to stem his curiosity, Hank took a row over to see how the very first renters were making out. He found Mr. Burns standing on a large flat rock close to shore, casting his fishing line out into the deeper water.

"Good morning Mr. Burns. How are you finding everything?" asked Hank, lifting his oars to glide gently closer to where the other man stood.

"Very pleasant, thanks. There's only one thing. We couldn't drink the tea. It tasted oily. We tried it again this morning, and had to throw it out."

Perplexed, Hank apologized and said he would rectify the situation before the day was out.

When he got home, he told Pat about the oily water and sat there on the canvas chair, scratching his head in bewilderment. "You did rinse out the oil drums, didn't you Hank?" she asked her husband. He stopped his scratching and looked at her. "Well you have to rinse them out for heaven's sake. Hank—they've had oil in them and you have to flush out any trace that might be left". He had never even thought of it. The rest of the day all five oil drums had to be taken down, emptied, flushed and pumped full of water again.

The Burns family stayed for a week and before they left on Saturday morning, told Hank they'd like to have the same cabin again the next summer, but for two weeks. "I knew it," he beamed to Pat after they had headed down the drive, "Piece of cake."

Dogs love exercise too

PET CORNER

by Helen Robertson

"To be loved is the best way of being useful". — French Proverb

As vital as movement, exercise and play are to the human variety of animals, it is no surprise that our domestic chums of the canine species explode with anticipation when the word "walk" is so much as whispered in passing. One has to wonder about the definite possibility of a sixth sense, the uncanny sapience of time, or unforeseen knowledge of the dog, when we have been merely "considering" play or walk-time with our pet. Already his keen ears may be pricked up, he's tail wagging behind him at the door or perhaps we're suddenly staring up and into two black, wet nostrils after being knocked to the ground, while being given a generous bath (our repayment for unwelcome baths bestowed on our pets in the past!) The message is clear. It's time for exercise.

For their own protection and that of other dogs and humans, according to law, our pets should be kept under control with fenced yards, chains and leashes (although getting off chains and sneaking outdoors are sometimes unavoidable occurrences). It follows that our dogs' need for exercise is a necessity and one of responsible pet ownership.

As with anything else though, there are some do's and don'ts to be aware of. Before you decide to take your "small" dog jogging, remember that these devoted creatures will run until they drop just to keep up with their master. The only means any dog has to sweat is through panting so you can imagine how tired and hot a terrier would get trying to keep up on those short legs; without taking a breather. Breaks are important for all dogs running any distance, especially in the summer, as they are consequently very susceptible to heat stroke. (If heat exhaustion does occur, cold water applied to the body followed by immediate veterinary attention is crucial). Walking is a simple and efficient form of exercise for dogs. Start off slowly and increase to a brisk walk. Summer walks should be ideally restricted to early morning or evening.

Exercising your dog on a full-stomach, especially the larger breeds can lead to a tragic and often fatal outcome known as "gastic torsion" which is a sudden twisting of the intestines. If you're walking your dog on a road use a leash, and never run your dog in traffic. Even if you've found a quiet back road or open area, carry your leash with you in case of surprise encounters with other animals, people, or cars. If walking is not your favourite activity, there are several games which can keep you both in top-condition. Throw and fetch (in your own yard) can be played with a ball, a stick, or the ever-popular frisbee (dogs love them!) Retrieving objects burns up calories and provides stimulation for your pet while fulfilling his need to please you.

Don't forget praise! Small high jumps or hurdle courses can be made with cartons or other soft materials for your dog to attempt with you urging him on. For a mainly indoor pet or person, staircase climbing is great for cardiovascular strength and the muscular system. Stand at the top of the stairs and throw a ball down for your pet to retrieve.

Before performing these exercise routines, make sure that your pet has a "clear bill of health" from his vet. Watch closely for signs of fatigue and stop as soon as it is noticed. Young pups initiate their own exercise so the above exercises should not be forced in their first few months (including jogging). Pups can easily overdo it and permanent damage can occur to their young joints and bones. Common sense must also be exercised with the older pet. A drastic change in his routine could be harmful so don't take chances. Consult your vet, as with any diet or exercise program.

Remember that alot of pets spend their days waiting for us to come home, and the highlight of their day (besides eating!) is that extra period of time you spend playing with them. A physically healthy pet is a content and grateful one, so next time you hear those penetrating whines, and glance at those wanton eyes, don't just walk on by. Reciprocate the pleasure that your pet so freely and willingly gives to you.

By-laws are passed

At the June meeting of Snowdon Township Council the following items were dealt with:

As provided for under Section 60 of the Municipal Act, Deputy Reeve D. Wruth was appointed presiding officer for this meeting of Council.

Road Voucher Number 5 for the month of May 1988, in the amount of $7,356.66 was approved for payment.

Four land severance applications were approved.

By-laws 4/88 and 5/88 were given three readings and passed, being by-laws to appoint Eric Stearns as Chief Building Official, By-law Enforcement Officer and Canine Control Officer for the township.

The Reeve and Clerk were authorized to sign the Fire Agreement with the Townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden for the current year.

A donation of $100 will be made to the Haliburton County Fair to be applied against prize monies for the Heavy Horse Competition.

Under Section 496 of the Municipal Act, reductions in the assessment for the current year will be applied against three properties as buildings on these properties have been demolished.

By-law 3/88, a by-law to strike the mill rates for the current year was given three readings and passed. The residential rate will be 1778 mills and the commercial rate 2091 mill reflecting an overall decrease of 2.4 percent from the 1987 mill rate.

Flood mapping criticized

illogical premise! Furthermore, the Gull River floodplain mapping was predicated upon the Timmins storm rather than Hurricane Hazel despite the fact that the latter storm actually impacted on the Minden area with no flooding!

The planning official then indicated that the preferable means of determining floodplain was the "100 year flood". The definition of this term is vague but it appears to be related to the worst storm to impact on an area in a 100 year time frame. Unfortunately, data on water levels in the Gull river are only available over about 45 years. In order to apply the "100 year flood" alternative, then, data from other watersheds has been transposed to the Minden area to "estimate" possible flood conditions over a 100 year period. This process of transposing data from other watersheds repeats the illogical assumption upon which the Regional storm alternative is based. Trying to equate different watersheds on the basis of statistical data is a very complicated, particularly if one takes into account the effect of topographical features on the meteorological probabilities of precipitation rates. As a result of these factors, properties that have never flooded in living memory are being identified as prone to flooding and are thus being devalued.

Accepting that these alternatives are based on illogical and therefore unfair assumptions suggests that the only logical criteria upon which to base the extent of floodplain is that of "an observed flood event". Minden has flooded twice in the past 45 years, both of those floods occurred during the spring when runoff from snowmelt was extremely high. On a watershed having an extensive system of dams and reservoir lakes, a flood due to spring runoff could reasonably be attributed to poor water level controls. As data on water levels increase the success of water management on the Gull River has increased such that no floods have occurred in the past 35 years while the area had flooded twice in the previous ten when statistics on water levels in the waterway were just beginning to be kept. As a result, before land use controls identifying flood prone areas are instituted, I feel that it is incumbent upon the Province to prove that improper management of water levels, based on a lack of data, did not cause the two previous flood events. As at the most recent public meeting no consideration of this suggestion had been undertaken.

The Provincial press release of May 9, 1988, states that "the greater amount of flooding occurs as a result of a severe summer or fall rainstorm". The Gull River has never flooded as a result of such a storm, including Hurricane Hazel which impacted on the area but caused no flooding. If historical data from the affected watershed is used as the criteria to determine floodplain, owners of undeveloped lands which have never flooded would not be unfairly affected by floodplain proposals. The current Provincial policy unfairly impacts on the value of such lands.

Given the fact that the Province is concerned with flooding due to storms and that the Gull River has not flooded as a result of a storm together with the fact that it has only flooded due to spring runoff and that such flooding could well have been controlled by better water level controls it would seem that the local municipalities may well have been correct in not indicating any floodplain on their original land use regulations. Without further proof from Provincial officials one can only assume that this is so.

Good planning principles are not normally based on "what ifs" such as form the present foundation of the Provincial Floodplain Policy. The planning, on that basis, has resulted in hardship to owners whose lands have never flooded and can never be developed if the proposed land use regulations are passed. Your prompt response, in a public forum, will aid all affected in making and accepting a proper decision. If such a response is not forthcoming, one can only assume that the above argument that such land use regulations are not needed in the area of the Gull River is irrefutable and decisions should be taken, based on that knowledge.

County council briefs...

Don Shortreed reported that Hasting County has experienced good results from the spraying program to control the Gypsy Moth.

It was reported that Sheila Hatch will address Council on what Muskoka is presently doing on the Acid Rain situation if invited.

Harry Davis informed Council that there hasn't been any further meetings of the Water Levels Committee but that the lake levels are remaining constant and the Trent System is in good shape.

Warden Bob McCausland said a meeting had been held to discuss the proposed amalgamation of some of area municipalities. John Eakins had been invited to come and address Council on the subject but was unavailable at this time.

Eakins will be invited to the July county council meeting to discuss county restructuring.

Carol Puffer reported that the last meeting was held in Monmouth on April 21, 1988. The staff is busy calling the resorts on summer availability for guests. The Spring Shows have been completed with excellent results expected. The Chamber is hiring four students this summer. One through the S.E.E.D. program and three through other agencies.

Puffer asked if there were any questions regarding the terms of reference for the proposed study. After all questions had been answered the following resolution was presented.

The County of Haliburton accepted the terms of reference as circulated re—County of Haliburton Economic Development Study and agreed to proceed with advertising for a Consultant so that an estimate of costs can be ascertained.

Council ratified the Collective Agreement with the Canadian Union of Public Employees and its Local 1225 (Hyland Crest Senior Citizens' Home) in accordance with the Memorandum of Settlement dated April 28, 1988.

A number of shoreline road allowance closure by-laws were passed.

Lake levels 82 per cent despite dryness

Rainfall during the past week has slowed the decline of lake levels throughout the Trent watershed. Reservoir levels are 4 percent less than last week, averaging 82 percent of their full levels on June 27. This percentage is equivalent to levels normally occurring in mid-July and is 5 percent or approximately 15 centimeters higher than the reservoirs were at this time in 1987.

The Kawartha remain near their full levels with no short-term threat of low water conditions.

The Otonabee and Trent Rivers will remain at their minimum required outflow.

A celebration of 50 years of fellowship

Proud Eagle Lake Community Church has 50th birthday

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

A COMMUNITY IS MORE than a village. It is a gathering of spirits, perhaps not of like mind, but of a common desire to set personal likes and dislikes aside in the hopes everyone will benefit.

In Eagle Lake there is a strong sense of community. And in the heart of this village stands a simple white church which exemplifies all the positive things the word community means. One and all are welcomed to this religious, cultural and social gathering point—the Eagle Lake Community Church.

On Sunday, July 17, the church will be celebrating its 50th Anniversary, but really, in those 50 years, few things have changed. The faces age and wrinkle, the old are missed while the young are rejoiced over, and as any matriarch requires, there are a few cosmetic changes to the physical expression of the building's facade. Yet in the ebb and flow of human life, the sense of community is constant and will guide the church through its next 50 years.

A commitment to togetherness

As it should be in a place where togetherness is paramount, it was a group of people who met last week to discuss the history of their church. Some of them were young when the church was, others joined its history mid-stream; all are proud of what the church means in their life and their village. Lew and Rene Roberts, Elva Heard, Marie Wallace and Peggie Fawns are just a few of the people who know what a special place the Eagle Lake Community Church is.

"I have never heard one squabble about denominational differences," Mrs. Wallace says of the church which draws no lines between faiths. "Worshippers have kept their love of God and their neighbours uppermost in their mind and have avoided division. Through the years the church has been an inspiration and a stabilizing force in the community."

There weren't enough people of any one denomination to align the church with, the Roberts remember back to the days when the idea of a church was born. In later years—sometime in the late 1940's—a vote would be taken, with 21 ballots coming in favour of affiliating with the Anglicans, and another 17 choosing the United Church people, yet in one of those twists of fate, neither one was adopted. The people wanted a morning service and the only minister who had any spare time on Sunday morning was the Baptist preacher from Haliburton. The church stayed non-denominational and since 1957, Rev. John Smith of the Lakeside Baptist Church has been delivering the Sunday morning sermon.

A simple white church is the heart of the community

It was the Eagle Lake Women's Society which was the motivating force behind the establishment of a permanent church. Formed just a year earlier, its primary goal was to raise enough money to start the church.

The community was in a state of flux. Before the International Cooperaage opened its mill in 1931, most of the farming homesteads were "on the hill", where the original school was built. The Cooperaage had more job openings than the village had workers so there were many newcomers to the area who built their homes in the valley, closer to their work. Today these houses form the centre of the present-day village.

Church services were held wherever most people could be gathered at one time, sometimes in the school, sometimes in the old road camp dining room. Baptist Rev. J. W. Bee, the first minister at the new church, remembers the days prior to 1938 in a speech given for the church's 25th anniversary:

"It seems from my records that the very first time I preached in Eagle Lake was on June 21, 1936. That was in the schoolhouse up on the hill. The people turned out quite well for the services there. I preached 11 times that year, having the last service on November 29. I am quite sure that by the end of the warm weather we had moved down to Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Upton's boarding house just at the turn of the road across the bridge, towards Haliburton. (The old Eagle Lake Road started off the Harburn Road, just past Allcorn or Luna's Hill.) Some services were held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lew Pritchard, probably in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Greer as well. (Mr. Greer was the manager of the Cooperaage and a strong supporter of church life.)

"I would like to say for the record that some others had conducted services before my time in the old school. I believe the Anglicans and the Salvation Army had come in from the old Harburn road at that time.

"On March 14, 1937, we began services again and this time it is likely they were held in the old road camp dining hall. It was heated with an oil drum stove, I think. The services seem to have been held about every other Sunday, until October, when we had them every week. The work was carried on almost continuously from this date on."

A friendly preacher

"He and his wife would come to your place and be just one of the family," Mrs. Heard remembers of Rev. Bee. "He was down to earth—sermons on alcohol, no dancing, no chewing tobacco, respect for your parents..."

It was her father, Ed Packard, who had started the Sunday School classes in the old schoolhouse in 1934, and what a chore it was to reach in the wintertime, adds Mr. Roberts, when the snow was so packed so high you could barely get through. The reason it took so long to have a real church

Contributing what you can

During the Sunday service, people would do what they could to further the monetary wealth of the church. In the days when men were working for $2.25 a day, donations of 25 and 50 cents were given with a lot of thought.

On July 17, just after the neighbouring Catholics made their way to their first service in the new St. Anthony's church, the pews in the Eagle Lake Community Church were filled for the first service. Rev. Bee thought it would be nice if the congregation heard a guest speaker, so he invited Rev. John Fleming of Minden to officiate. Fifty years later, Rev. Fleming's son, Rev. Ian Fleming, will be officiating at the anniversary. Other preachers through the years include Revs. Kerr, Grahams, and Jull, 1945-50, Rev. E.A. Lorimer, 1950-54, and Rev. Robertson from 1954 to 1957.

"Everyone was so thrilled to have a church," the Roberts remember. In 1938, and even more so in 1988, it was the only place you could go to and meet your neighbours. There was the school for many years, but now that it is closed, the church is the only public building in the community. (Elections are even held here. If a voter is unable to make their way up the stairs to the church, the ballot box will be brought down to them.)

Each family had their own pew, which was built by a Mr. Horsley from West Guilford and later refinished by Grant Ray after everyone contributed to the cost. Donations to the church are never solicited, however; the people just seem to have a desire to donate in which ever way they can. Later donations came in the form of memorial contributions—in 1960, the communion table was dedicated in memory of Fred Greer; the minister's chair was dedicated "to the glory of God and in memory of our loved ones who have worshipped here"; in 1974, Marie Wallace designed a stitichery which the women of the community made and dedicated to the memory of Beatrice Barry, Ann Buchanan and Leana Upton (it has recently been replaced by a silk panelling by Margaret Barnett and now hangs in the Baptist church in Haliburton); the cross was made by Kevin Dunlop; parishioners bought new hymn books in memory of someone; general donations were made for the organ; in 1980, a hand-crafted lecturn was dedicated to the memory of Jessie Vincent and Esther Thurston, "two valued members of the congregation"; the two collection plates were given in the memory of Lyle Horsley and Jimmy Nicholls, who died in World War II; the first stained glass window was dedicated by the Heard and Packard family and Paul Way of Haliburton made those which surround it, each donated by various members of the congregation including the Hobden, Tripp, Reid, and Wallace/Wilkinson families. The women of the church even take turns cleaning it to cut down on costs.

A Yuletide ritual

One of the favourite evenings for one and all

'I had not agitated for a church but there seemed to be a spontaneous desire in the community to have one,' writes Rev. J.W. Bee, the first minister at the church. It was the Eagle Lake Women's Society which took the matter to heart, with the members' husbands providing the labour after work built, he says, is because "there were more ministers than congregation."

But when the mills guaranteed employment for so many men, the community grew to such an extent that finally there would be more parishioners than preachers. The Eagle Lake women went home to discuss the plan with their husbands, for there is no sense in dreaming about a church unless there's someone to build it.

"I had not agitated for a church but there seemed to a spontaneous desire in the community to have one. Mrs. Hathaway was one who talked a lot about it," wrote Rev. Bee.

Money was scarce in those days and the community was grateful when Fred Greer, W.O. Bailey and Lew Pritchard, who later became the trustees of the church, came to the rescue. "They got together and decided that if everyone helped with the construction, they'd back the mortgage."

It is not clear how much the mortgage was but in 1943, the principal and interest owing to Victoria Trust was $195, with a principal of $244 still owing. Then on February 21, 1944, the mortgage was ceremoniously burnt and the church was "free of all debts and encumbrances."

In the fall of 1937, the work began, with men donating their time after work at the Cooperaage to lend a hand with the manual labour. "It was just part of everyday life," says Mr. Roberts. "We always worked nights."

is the annual Christmas Concert. When the Cooperaage was open, 60 children used to attend Sunday School (taught by Mrs. Hathaway, Olga Black, Grace Voycey, Rene Roberts, and Edna Tripp in the early days), and they would practice songs and skits for entertainment. It was held a week before Christmas and the church was packed. The number of children has dwindled since then but Mrs. Wallace manages "to come through" successfully each year. However, the Christmas Eve service is the still the most popular annual event at the church.

While population dictated that the church not be affiliated with any one denomination, there is strong support for the idea that one and all are welcome to this community church. Even back in 1938, Rev. Bee was heartened by the openness of the church and his successor many years later says that while it sometimes makes it difficult for him, he too believes the church is made better because of its non-denominational outlook.

"It's always been a community church and I wouldn't want to see it any other way," says Rev. Smith. He recognizes that this couldn't necessarily work in other communities, and it is because of the spirit of togetherness already present in Eagle Lake that the church has thrived.

When Rev. Smith resigned after 25 years, thinking the congregation may want someone else preaching to them, a vote was taken and he was asked to return. "We love John," the group says. "He's a very down to earth person."

"It's been a learning experience," says the minister with strong roots in his Baptist faith. "It's been good for me because it's given me a broader outlook...I've become more tolerant."

Because it steps beyond denominational ties, Rev. Smith believes it has become more attractive to the people who make their way to the community. "It's catered to a wider audience because of its unique status." What he does think the church misses, however, is the chance to extend that fellowship to other communities, something facilitated by having churches of the same denomination elsewhere

A faith which binds

Drawbacks aside, it is the community spirit of the church which binds people to it. And if their hearts are with the church, they are willing to work to make it the best church possible.

Everyone can remember the old clunker of a wood stove, which blackened the walls with its sooty emissions. Enough donations were gathered to pay for a new oil-burning furnace which allows enough room to hold Sunday School classes downstairs, whereas before children were put in groups among the pews. (The church also sponsors a youth group.) In 1971, the first time people were directly asked for money, Mr. Harvey Tripp went around to everyone in the community asking for donations to pay for aluminum siding which the men put up at no cost. More recently, everyone who can remember those embarrassing—and cold—trips to the outhouse were more than pleased when indoor plumbing was installed in 1986.

"We've never really had trouble paying for anything," the group says, thanks to the generous spirit of the parishioners and community.

Another addition to the church which costs nothing but the time people are willing to spend are the prayer requests. In times of joy and sadness, people place a little piece of paper on the offering plate, stating who is in need of prayer. Someone else then picks up the piece of paper on the way out, and the resulting fellowship "binds us together."

Fellowship extended

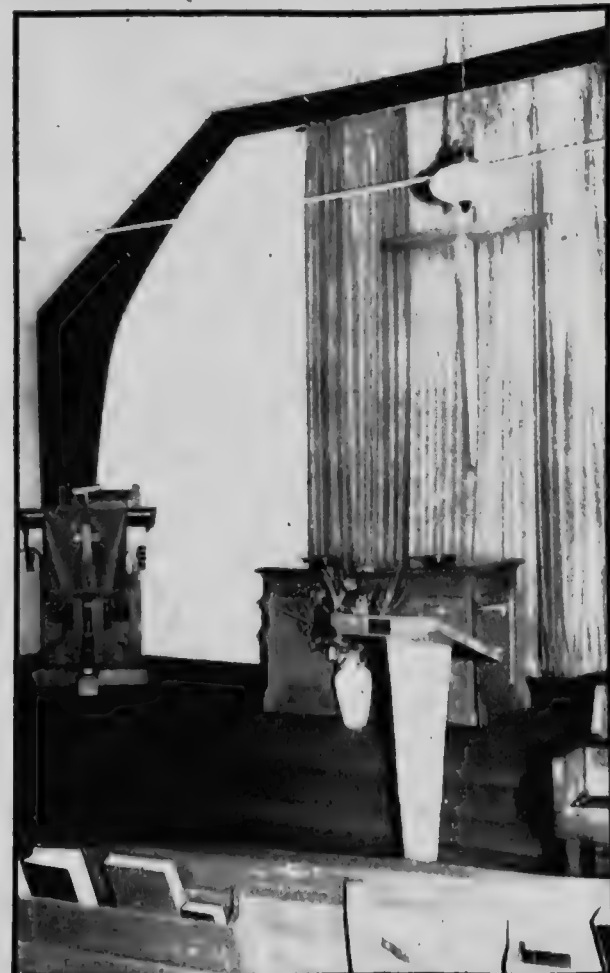

But you don't have to live in the community for generations in order to have that fellowship extended towards you. Mrs. Fawns remembers her first visit to the church back in 1955. She and her husband Harold had bought Fawns Cottages and was so busy that first summer, she didn't have time to go to church. "By fall I really wanted to get connected with the church, I missed it." Coming out of the church, she was greeted by Mrs. Roberts who invited her to help with the Sunday School class and gratefully only asked Mrs. Fawns to play the few hymns she knew.

"We've grown up with everyone as they've come," say the Roberts, who have seen a lot of coming and going at the church. By getting to know everyone, they feel more closely tied with the people they call their neighbours.

Perhaps the Church Covenant explains it all:

"We engage, by the aid of the Holy Spirit, to walk together in Christian love; to strive for the advancement of this church in knowledge, holiness and comfort; to promote in prosperity and spirituality; to sustain its worship, ordinances, disciplines and doctrines; to contribute cheerfully and regularly to the support of the Ministry, the expenses of the church, the relief of the poor and the spread of the Gospel through all nations."

"We further engage to watch over one another

Most of the fixtures at the church have been donated by its generous parishioners

The first marriage performed at the church was to unite Elva Packard and Lloyd Heard. It was June, 1940, and since then, many nuptial vows have been exchanged in brotherly love; to remember each other in prayer; to aid each other in sickness and distress; to cultivate Christian sympathy in feeling and courtesy of speech; to be slow to take offense, but always ready for reconciliation and mindful of the rules of our Saviour to secure it without delay."

Everyone is invited to join with the congregation of the Eagle Lake Community church as they celebrate their 50 years of togetherness in two services this Sunday.

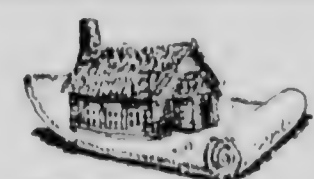

The anniversary service is at 10 a.m. At 7:30 that night, Bill Gliddon will be leading the Masonic Mens Choir

Day Camp helps learning disabled kids in fun ways

by MIKE PARK

Staff reporter

SUMMER MAY BE here, but Victoria Street School is still running classes every day. These classes are actually day camps for children with learning disabilities and are run by The Association for Children with Learning Disabilities (ACLD) and the Haliburton Board of Education.

Dawn Brohman, President of ACLD, says the purpose of the camp three-fold: to help the kids maintain the educational level they had in June, to promote the child's self-esteem and to help them socialize better with others.

A learning disabled child is not physically or mentally handicapped. They have perfectly good eyes and ears and have an average to above average I.Q. Their problem is that their nervous system scrambles up the signals coming in from these organs so the child can't understand them or learn. A common learning disability is Dyslexia, a condition that can scramble the letters in a word so it is unintelligible. For example, while a normal person may see the word "Dyslexia", a dyslexic may see "xylaised". or gibberish. Other children may have problems hearing exactly what is said and have perfect hearing.

As a result of their various conditions, some of the children can't read well enough, some can't write very well, while others may not be able to express themselves with speech. This means they can easily be mistaken for "dumb" or "lazy" because they fall behind their classmates.

This is why the camp tries to maintain the child's academic development, says Brohman. She says all kids lose a little knowledge over the summer. But since learning disabled children are already behind, they need the extra attention the day camp gives to help them keep up.

Building self-esteem

Brohman says the child's learning problem means they have experience a string of traumatic failures and thus have a very low opinion of themselves. Her camp tries to build up a child's self-esteem so they will feel good about themselves and then be able to learn better. This kind of attitude will last longer than just the summer, she says. It will be something they can fall back on when they feel down during the school year.

"They have a bank of feelings they can draw on later," Brohman explains.

During one day of the week, they make crafts, such as fridge magnets, to give to friends and relatives. Brohman says the family's appreciation for these homemade gifts is a large part of the esteem building process.

Making friends

Socialization is also a big part of her program. She says these children often have problems making friends and taking to people because, just as they have problems reading words, they also have problems reading faces and expressions. The camp helps

The 3R's don't work for these children

These kids have no apparent handicap. They have perfect health and some of them have above-average IQ. They just have a problem with learning. The Association for Children with Learning Disabilities runs a day camp at Victoria Street School to help them learn how to learn them learn how to make and keep friends.

Brohman says one of the most novel tools which helps the kids in all three areas is playing cards. Crazy Eights and Fish teach them hand/eye coordination and the ability to interact with others. They learn how to differentiate between the symbols on the cards and how to talk to people when they play. Card games also teach them concentration, she says. Many of these children are hyper-active and playing cards shows them that they have to stay put and concentrate if they want to play. If they get up, she explains, they risk losing their turn and no one wants that.

There are 32 learning disabled children at the camp from all over the county, Minden to Gooderham, ranging in age from 6 to 11 years old. They are selected for the camp by their regular teachers, who fill out forms describing each student's strengths as well as their particular learning disability. Brohman says this helps her staff make the child feel good about himself by playing up that good quality. That in turn helps them learn, she adds.

"We want to do as much building as we can," she says.

Other ways to learn

Brohman says learning disabled children can be helped by learning through alternate methods and by using other senses. For example, she says, if a child has a visual disability, they can learn the alphabet through touch. They may not be able to see a letter "A", but they can trace a sandpaper "A" and memorize it, she says. Others who can't write learn how to speak and express themselves better. The secret, says Brohman, is teaching the child how to compensate for their particular disability and thus be able to learn.

She says York University has outstanding programs for their students who may have learning disabilities. All the student needs to do is identify themselves and their particular disability and the University will cater to their needs, she says. This means a student who can't write would be allowed to take oral rather than written exams, she explains.

A learning disability does not mean a child will never be able to learn. Brohman says she knows a woman who is remarkably intelligent and has written a major book—yet she can't read a word.

Brohman says that's the most important thing for a learning disabled child to learn how to do—read. Without reading, she says, a person will have a very hard time living up to their potential and just surviving in the modern world.

But Brohman warns that her school is not a remedial class. Its main purpose is to maintain the child's present academic status, not to teach them more. She says parents shouldn't expect that. Occasionally, a child at the camp does learn how to cope with the disability and keep up to their regular classes, but this is not the rule. That kind of training is a year round requirement and usually takes place in the regular school setting.

Community backing

Though most of the school's funding comes from the Board of Education, Brohman points out that there is a lot of community backing for the camp. The Rotary Club gives $2000 every year for travel expenses and subsidizing the enrollment of children whose parents can't afford the $25 fee for the summer. They have also received donations from the Minden Kinsmen, which helps pay for the kids lunches.

Brohman's staff has had a week of intensive training and are prepared for almost any emergency. They are local girls who have shown an intense interest in children. The government's Experience 88 employment program helps pay their wages. Most of them are two and three year veterans of the camp and know how things operate.

So next time you hear about a kid who's "lazy" or "dumb" or "needs to try harder" stop and think. Maybe he's not as dumb as people think. Maybe he's a frustrated child who can't quite read because the letters look funny or can't quite write because he just can't make those letters. Maybe he's the kind of child who should camp at Victoria Street School with Dawn Brohman and her staff.

SENIOR LEAGUE

by Pearl Lyle

Dear Readers: Birthdays here for July are Amelia Good, Lilian James, Carrie Jones and Pearl Lyle. We wish them many, many more.

My callers on the weekend were Jan Wilkinson from Stouffville and my daughters Anna Gordon, Jean Hewitt and Kari Francis. Gertie McKay had her brother Edger and his wife Ellen from Kinmount. Winnie Barnum was out for lunch yesterday with her sister and husband Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cameron of Peterborough. Alice Todd had a visit with Harold and Fran of Richmond Hill on Saturday and Sunday and visited Jim and Barbara at Pigeon Lake. Guests with Dora Dawson from Friday 'till Monday were her niece Doreen Gray of Weston, Cousin Leon Frith and friend of Toronto, her nephew Bob Dawson and wife, June Johnston of Toronto and Mr. and Mrs. Bell Ferrier of Ancaster. So you see Dora had a busy and pleasant weekend. My daughters came on my birthday July 5 and took me out for lunch. I wasn't very well so we didn't stay out long. It was about 90 degrees in the shade.

The service Sunday evening was by Rev. J. Burgess. He informed us his wife is coming along nicely and may soon be able to come home from the hospital. The service on Tuesday morning was by Father George Elliott of Minden Anglican Church.

When unkind things that are not true, behind your back are said, just go your own sweet smiling way, that's how you're sure to win the day.

Until next week.
Intended for last week.

Hello Readers: Our chapel service Sunday evening was by Rev. J. Burgess with Mrs. Rose on the organ. On Tuesday morning Rev. Kent led the service.

We welcome two new residents, Ada Turral and Gertrude McKay. We hope they will like it here.

I understand Doris Robertson is coming along fine since her surgery. Mrs. Shuyler is still on our sick list. I'm sorry to say Mrs. Schultze is in the hospital. We wish everyone a speedy recovery.

Our Thursday afternoon tea was managed by the Auxiliary and was really nice. Everyone enjoyed it.

Bert Harrison had his daughter Phyllis to see him on Monday. My daughter Anna Gordon called for me on Sunday. We went for a nice long drive, visited the cemetery at St. Peter's Church. Verullani, had dinner at Richard's Restaurant in Minden and then home. It was all very pleasant for a change.

Well! Our Strawberry tea and Bazaar was a huge success. The lucky winner of the handcrafted quilt was Mrs. Elizabeth Sichterman, Napanee, Ontario. Congratulations!

Until next week.
Politeness is like an air cushion.

There may be nothing in it, but it eases the jolts wonderfully.

Michelle Parish, the daughter of Stan Parish of Haliburton, graduated on June 24, 1988 from Georgian College of Applied Arts and Technology in the Certified Dental Assisting programme.

Anthony was the recipient of the Mable Morrow Award, the Academic Standing Award and the Year Four English Award. He is the grandson of Mike and Connie Biagi, Lloyd (Buck) Baker, and Dorelle Baker. 'Listen in' on MPs at the library

COUNTY LIBRARY NEWS

by Joel Levis

Did you ever wonder what was really said in the House of Commons on a certain day? Would you like to keep track of what any individual member might be saying in the House? Did you know that the words of the Honourable Members are taken down word for word and that that record—often called "Hansard"—after the person who first got the job in Westminster—is available through the County Library for your information?

The County Library has resumed the collection of the House of Commons Debates as it is more commonly called in Canada and will be keeping them on file for the interest of the general public.

To supplement this information, the County Library is also keeping Votes and Proceedings which details the changes made in individual pieces of legislation and also reports on how the many members voted.

Finally, the Order Paper and Notices has been acquired. This is similar to the agenda of any meeting and outlines the status of legislation and all of the other bits of government business that is to be considered.

This information will be invaluable to anyone who is eager to keep informed on the business of government. Coming soon: Canada Gazette. Watch for it! Haliburton County Public Library—serving you since 1965.

Service charges changed

REPORT FROM PARLIAMENT

by Bill Scott, MP

In recent years, there has been an increase in the number and cost of service fees charged by financial institutions such as banks, trust companies and credit unions. Many consumers have found these fees to be bewildering and irritating.

The House of Commons Finance Committee recently recommended a series of measures that would restrict service fees charged by banks and federally-regulated financial institutions, ensure adequate notice and establish complaint procedures.

The government is acting to ensure that consumers are treated fairly when banks impose service fees. The government's initiative rests on four basic principles:

Information: Customers must have sufficient information to compare fees charged by different banks. They must also be notified in advance of any fee increase.

Competition: Competition is the best way to obtain and maintain fair pricing practices. Unnecessary government regulation is to be avoided.

Basic Services: Basic banking services should be available at little or no cost.

Complaints: Customers must know where and how to complain about service charges.

As a result of discussions with the government, the banks have voluntarily agreed to provide basic accounts, and to eliminate certain fees.

Legislative action will be taken to ensure that customers are adequately informed about service charges and informed in advance about fee increases.

Legislative action will also be taken to ensure that an effective system is put in place to handle consumer complaints.

Information about service fees must be readily available if there is to be full and fair competition among the banks. In the future, customers opening a personal account will be given a list of existing charges, and will be told how the bank will inform them of fee changes. All bank branches will be required to tell consumers about the most common charges, including certified cheques, N.S.F. cheques, overdraft privileges using banking machines, and stop payment orders on a cheque. Banks will be required to post notices of fee increases 60 days in advance, and provide 30 days notice to customers who receive monthly statements.

Most banks and trust companies either do provide, or have agreed to provide, basic accounts. Such accounts have no charges for deposits on withdrawals, no maintenance fees, and in the future will have no minimum balance requirements.

The government will monitor the banks to ensure that basic accounts are provided and will not hesitate to legislate if they are not.

The government will also publish comparative information on accounts offered by financial institutions.

The banks and major trust companies have agreed to eliminate a number of unfair service fees and charges:

- Fees will not be charged for deposit of N.S.F. cheque in a personal account.

- There will be no charge to close a personal account which has been open for more than 90 days.

- No charges will be applied for failing to maintain a minimum balance on a basic account.

- There will be no charge for any transaction resulting from an institution's error.

- Fees on fixed-term deposits, notes and G.I.C.s will not be increased during the term of the investment.

- For inactive accounts over $10, customers will not be charged if they respond to a letter advising that a charge could occur.

There must be an effective and easily understood system to handle consumer complaints.

Government legislation will require banks to establish procedures for dealing with complaints and designate employees to deal with complaints.

If customers cannot obtain satisfaction from their financial institution, the federal government's Superintendent of Financial Institutions will mediate.

The new legislation provides for a maximum penalty of $500,000 for breach of the disclosure and complaints provisions without reasonable cause. The existing fine of $1,000 is too small to be a deterrent.

"For who among men knows the thoughts of a man except the man's spirit within him?" 2 Corinthians 2:11

Blueberries—yum! I have yet to find a place around Haliburton where I can pick blueberries. If any of you have a "secret spot" that you would be willing to share, give me a call! Anyway, I hope you enjoy these recipes—they are all delicious.

BLUEBERRY BUCKLE

1/2 cup white sugar
1/3 cup butter
1 egg
1/2 tsp. vanilla
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
1/3 cup milk
3 cups fresh blueberries
Topping: 1/3 cup packed brown sugar
1/4 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
2 tbsp. butter

In a bowl cream together granulated sugar with butter; beat in egg and vanilla. Stir together flour, baking powder and salt. Stir half of the flour mixture into butter mixture; blend in milk and remaining flour mixture to make stiff batter. Spread batter in greased 8-inch square pan. Cover evenly with blueberries. Topping: In small bowl, stir together brown sugar, flour and cinnamon. Cut in butter until mixture is crumbly. Sprinkle evenly over blueberries. Bake at 350 degrees until crisp and browned on top and knife inserted in centre comes out clean, about 40 minutes. Makes 6 to 8 servings. (If using frozen blueberries, extend cooking time to 50 minutes.) Serve with cream, whipped cream, or ice cream.

BLUEBERRY CRISP

4 cups blueberries
2 tbsp. tapioca
1/3 cup sugar
1 tsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. lemon peel
2/3 cup brown sugar

3/4 cup rolled oats
1/2 cup flour
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1/8 tsp. salt
6 tbsp. butter

Combine blueberries, tapioca, sugar, lemon juice and lemon peel and mix well. Pour into a greased 9-inch square baking pan. Mix together remaining ingredients and place on top of berries. Bake at 375 degrees for 40 minutes.

BLUEBERRY QUICK BREAD

2-1/2 cups flour
3/4 cup sugar
1 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
6 tbsp. butter
3/4 cup chopped walnuts
2 eggs
1 cup milk
1 tsp. vanilla
1-1/2 cups blueberries

In large bowl, mix flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Cut in butter until fine. Stir in walnuts. In small bowl, beat eggs lightly and stir in milk and vanilla. Stir into flour just until flour is moistened. Gently stir blueberries into batter. Spoon batter into greased and floured loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour and 20 minutes or until toothpick inserted into centre of loaf comes out clean. Makes 1 loaf.

NADA'S BLUEBERRY PIE

People are always asking me for my pie recipes. It is hard for me to print them because I don't use a recipe, but I will try to share my blueberry pie recipe with you.

Pastry for a double pie crust
4 cups fresh or frozen blueberries
1 cup sugar
Pinch of nutmeg
1 tbsp. grated lemon peel
1-1/2—2 tbsp. tapioca
Butter

Put half of crust in pie plate. Mix together the blueberries, sugar, nutmeg, lemon peel and tapioca. Pour into pastry. Dot with butter. Roll out remaining pastry and lay on top. I always put little slits in the top, then brush with cream and sprinkle with sugar. (This gives the pie a nice brown crust.) Bake at 400 degrees for 45 minutes or until the filling bubbles up through the slits.

Orange Lodge is robbed

COBOCONK NEWS

by Sheila Lake

Oh, for the joy and enthusiasm of a youngster! Have you seen the children as they take their swimming lessons at the park? there is no coaxing to get them in the water—but then with near 100 degrees temperatures the water is the place to be!

What a surprise I got on Monday evening when I unlocked the door at the Orange Hall. My mother-in-law was with me and right away something seemed unusual. Well, it turned out the hall had been broken into, a door at the back, facing east towards the stone building had been wrenched off its hinges. Burglars entered the little hall part, then smashed a glass in the door, reached in and unlocked the door into the main hall. Our alter has been stolen, four flags, our large banner that hung on the wall, pictures of our Queen and the Queen Mother and King George, our Warrent were taken along with a pedestal and seven press back chairs. Needless to say, I immediately notified police and as the other ladies arrived for our meeting, we tried to see just what all was stolen. Our big banner likely is hanging in someone's rec room, but where? Will police ever find the thief or our chairs?

Don't forget Saturday July 16 is the big Victoria County celebration with Lunch at 12:30 noon. Entertainment, line dancing and dancing and lucky draws all for $10.

Thanks to all who picked berries and worked so hard to make the Norland Canada Day celebrations a big success. This would be a lovely annual event to show our appreciation for all the privileges and freedom we have in this great country called Canada.

On Sunday July 5 the Ross Faulkners held their usual birthday party for Ross. Friends and relatives galore come to join the party. The Bill Brohm's from Gananaque, Lloyd Faulkner and Lawrence Davis from Foxboro, several from Toronto, Atkin and Laura Archer from Lindsay, Christine Vanderburg from Little Britian, Ann Thompson from Little Britian, Beryl Tamlin from Cambray and Darlene Philip from Toronto were among the visitors.

Lola Sims of Haliburton, Joan Cooper of West Guilford, Olive Meyers of Minden and yours truly, journey to the Red Oak Inn at Peterborough Tuesday evening to a colour meeting of Avon Canada, with president John Novastat in attendance.

Congratulations to Dr. Tom DeGeen on the swearing in as new Governor for the Rotary Club on June 30.

Some young lad goes up and down our road a lot on a motor bike or motorized bike. He does not wear a helmet and I hope his parents or someone will put some fear in him as that bike just zooms by and I won't be surprised that he could be seriously hurt before long. If you know this boy, do tell him to get a helmet on and at least protect his head. Just last night (Thursday) a motor bike driver zoomed around our street about 1:30 till midnight. Every so often he'd screech to the top of his lungs. Turns out he'd also been in the quarry, right to the top of some big piles of crushed stone, on his bike. I sure hope he does not get hurt because he sure is taking chances.

The "Come as you are" open air church services are now held each Sunday night at the IGA parking lot. Good speakers and lots of music. No need to dress in your Sunday best—just jump in the car and join in the Sunday evening worship.

Bake sale is successful

DORSET NEWS

by Phyllis Briscoe

Very happy birthday wishes to Leslie Tebbby who was four years old yesterday, July 12.

The Knox United Church held their annual Auction, Bake Sale and Flea Market on July 2 and report a tremendously successful response, the proceeds exceeding, by a large margin, last year's profit. they wish to thank those who participated, the workers, those who made donations as well as the general public who came to make purchases, all contributing to its success.

One of the many things we have to be thankful for in this beautiful country, is having a clean lake to pop into during the summer weather. With record temperatures turning homes into saunas, what a relief to get cooled off and refreshed in the cool waters of Lake of Bays or other lakes in the vicinity.

The sizzling weather isn't too bad for those who can loll around the beach and not move more than is absolutely necessary, but for individuals who are on a daily work schedule, especially those who do hard labour such as construction work, it is really debilitating. We hope there are no cases of heat prostration or sunstroke. If we could just bottle some of the warm air and keep it for next February.

The Dorset Senior Citizens Flea Market was once again a great success, thanks to all who participated.

There is a movie tonight at the Senior Centre, Crocodile Dundee, and the public is welcome. It begins at 7:30 p.m. and there is no admission charge.

I had a pleasant surprise last week when a couple of friends dropped in unexpectedly. Irene Minaker, who now lives in Toronto and her sister-in-law, May Hicks of Lochlin stopped by for a visit.

The Dorset Anglican Ladies are holding their summer Bake Sale on Saturday July 23 at 11:00 a.m. in front of Clayton's store. We hope that the heat abates a little before then.

H.H. If your dog gets into a mess of burrs, relieve the tangle by rubbing oil into it or by crushing the burrs with a pair of pliers. They can then be combed out.

Galway/Cavendish ready for its summer festival '88

KINMOUNT NEWS

by Millie Moss

Galway/Cavendish Summer Festival '88 is July 16, 1988. Events include a beef barbecue, bake table, snack bar, volleyball, a baseball tournament, dunk tank, pony rides, a horseshoe tournament and souvenir/white elephant table, from 10:00 a.m. to dusk at the Galway/Cavendish Fire Hall Number 2 on Highway 507. Sittings for the barbecue are at 5:00 p.m., 6:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. Tickets are available from local business, the Township Office and Committee members. Plan to attend and enjoy a fun day and evening.

Dance at the Galway Hall on August 6 from 8:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. All proceeds will be donated to the Community Recreation Facilities.

Happy birthday (39) to Peggy "Babe" Saunders of Norland on Thursday June 30. Among her special day dinner guests were Hilda Chynoweth, Ivy Boyce, Marjorie Fountain and Christina Kerr, four of her sisters. Chris is back for the summer in her Lindsay home from Arizona and she's doing well following all the surgery she went through while in Arizona. Court and Howard Saunders were also present at the party.

Thanks to the members of Kinmount United Church for the lovely card to Bill last week. He still has many doctor/hospital trips ahead of him but it's not holding him back too much.

Results of Kinmount Seniors Railroad Station Drop-In Centre euchre games held Thursday June 30: ladies high, Dorothy Stuart, ladies low, Ruby Schell, mens high, Charlie Henderson, mens low, Bob Allen, most lone hands, Helen Byne.

Some 229 paying dinner guests sat down to a delicious smorgasbord on Friday July 1 at Ward Park Recreational Centre in Norland. Earlier in the afternoon there were horseshoe pitching, darts and euchre games, goats, rabbits, rare fowl types, a pony and guinea pigs to pet. There were also free helium balloons for the kids and a crowded dance floor in the evening. Ward Park was sure a happy, busy place. Thanks to all who made the day a tremendous success.

The fireworks display at Kinmount Fairgrounds Sunday July 3 was a beautiful sight to behold and there weren't too many parking places left for all the folks who came later to see the show following a full day of celebrations, picnic, games, races, etc. In all, it was a terrific week end and Bill Scott MP was certainly a busy man going from one function to another.

Welcome home to Donna Stroud and Bill Moss Jr. who have recently enjoyed a train trip to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

Norland bingo is in full swing once again at the Community Hall on Highway 35, downtown Norland, every Monday evening.

Fun bingo where children are welcome, every Wednesday evening at the Kinmount Legion Hall. Come out and join in the fun.

Congratulations to Helen byne who was the lucky lady who won the Braun coffee maker in the IGA draw over the long week end in Kinmount.

Sorry to hear Ed Byrne is in hospital after surgery. I hope all is well soon.

It's good to hear Hugh Fountain is recovering in Oshawa General Hospital following two strokes.

Geordie Davidson, whom many of you over Norland/Coby way may remember from some years back as the congenial wee Irishman, is, and has been for a number of months, a patient in Mayle Hospital in Larne, County Antrim, Northern Ireland. I'm sure Geordie would love to hear from some of his old Canadian friends so why not drop a line or two with a card to cheer him up. c/o 26 Rashee Road, Ballydare, County Antrim, Northern Ireland, BT 399HJ.

Don't forget the Victoria

County Senior Citizens big day on July 16 at Norland Recreation Centre in Ward Park, North Norland. The fun begins at 12:30 p.m. There will be a buffet lunch and entertainment by the Hastings Family of Oro. For further information please call Lloyd Brown at 454-1509.

Welcome home to Win and Bill Wilson of R.R. 1, Kinmount. Win and Bill recently spent holidays with Alf and Ruth Brady and daughters Meghan and Sarah at their Kispix Valley, British Columbia home. It was a lovely two weeks with their children and grandchildren and included a rodeo at which Bill helped at making up beef on the bun. Little Meghan is now well and active following heart surgery a while back. The Wilsons' also spent a great week or so with Betty and John Lonsdale now of Sooke, British Columbia and former residents of Kinmount area. Win tells me Betty's flowers are beautiful and she and John are very happy in their new home. While in Sooke they went to the local bank and there met a daughter of Kinmount's Vi Crego and said daughter is to visit Kinmount this month. Later, Win and Betty went to a hairdresser and again, Vi Crego's daughter walked in! Did you ever find that tooth Betty?

While on another leg of their journey they visited with a cousin, Peg Mertens in Vancouver, B.C. and had a lovely lunch. Peg took the travellers to meet her son who owns an old English style pub in Ladner, B.C. complete with darts, English newspapers for patrons to read, all the trappings of an English pub even down to the owners accent, who is Canadian, but acquired the accent from the English girl he married. All in all the whole trip was very enjoyable.

Happy birthday to Dick Holbrook, sorry Dick, couldn't find your date, to Vi Cooke on July 21 and I'm told Betty Lonsdale celebrates her big day same as Vi, way out there in Sooke, B.C. followed by her husband John's birthday next day, July 22.

Welcome home to Vi Cooke of Irontide who recently spent a great week with her son Fred and his wife Donna and family at their home in Cobourg.

St. James Anglican Church ladies will hold their annual Salad Supper at Kinmount Community Hall on Saturday July 23 from 4:30 to 7:00 p.m. One of the occasions looked forward to each year by many!

Results of St. James Hall euchre, Tuesday July 5: ladies high, Gladys Anderson, ladies low, Ruby Schell, mens high, Lyle Anderson, mens low, David Anderson, lone hands, Dorothy Anderson. Definitely Anderson night! There were 19 players.

Our prayers are with Zita Elizabeth Williamson and her son Boyd.

Bob Hollobon is still undergoing many tests these days as is my own hubby. Hope all is well soon.

Visitors of Mary L. and John Pyke in Norland recently included Florence and Walter Noseworthy and family along with Mrs. Morgan from Brampton, Barb and Ron Babbidge from Oshawa, Lori Lynn Liscombe from Lindsay, Stephen Roberts of Barrie and a phone call from Stephen Coker in Huntsville to his grandmother, Mary Pyke, last week, told her that his mom Amy and dad Larry Coker of Uter-son who are travelling to Alaska via camper, ran in to a severe hail storm. That little item may cool you off!

I'm sorry to hear Irene Bartley has been ill of late. Get well soon Irene, raspberry picking is coming up.

We enjoyed having Helen Graham, Jesse Buxcey, Vi Cooke, Barbara McCluney and Vidda at our house Wednesday July 6.

It's nice to see Pearl Cowen of Minden out and around again following her recent surgery.

Results of Kinmount Seniors Railroad Station Drop-In Centre euchre games Thursday evening, July 7: ladies high, Vi Cooke, ladies low, Bev. Waites, mens high, Gord Taylor, mens low, David Anderson, lone hands, Inga Wessell.

I'm told a cottage has burned to the ground over the holiday weekend at Salarno Lake.

Syd Cilcus of Kirkfield suffered a nasty fall Wednesday evening as she was going to the Coboconk Lions Bingo.

Those weeds all along our roads are taking over again boys! Isn't it time they were cut down before somebody gets lost in them?

Well folks, stay well and happy, read the Echo and give me a call with your news at 488-2353. You tell me and I'll tell everybody else!

Lion's Bingo kaput

DORSET NEWS

by Phyllis Briscoe

We would like to congratulate the Dorset students who graduated from Huntsville High School. I haven't been successful in obtaining a complete list of the names of those graduating so have omitted them all. If anyone has a list would they please call me at 766-2237.

The sympathy of the community is extended to his wife Ev, his son Terry and all other relatives of George Burk, who died suddenly on Tuesday June 28. George was a lifelong citizen of Dorset, having moved here with his family from Fonthill, when he was a youth. Sympathy is also extended to his one remaining, Mrs. Marion Tyson. George was predeceased by two brothers, Earl and Reg, and one sister, Adelia. He will be sadly missed by his many friends in the community.

We had a delightful visit from our niece Kim Tebby, her husband Steve and their two daughters Merrin and Leslie one evening last week. The Tebbys are in the process of building a summer cottage on Kawagama Lake and were in to check on their lot.

Our summer Lions Bingo is apparently kaput. In spite of great effort and a lot of volunteer help getting the hall ready couldn't quite be accomplished. We will have to wait until next summer to appease our gambling appetites.

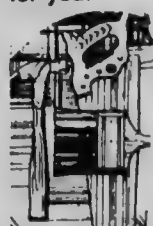

There will be a movie, "Crocodile Dundee" shown at the Senior Citizens Centre on Highway 117 on Wednesday July 13 at 7:30 p.m. Everyone is welcome and there is no charge for this entertainment.

There are a great number of humming birds around. Some people tell me they have 12, others say they have eight and so on. I never see a great number together, one or two come to the feeder at a time and I never know whether the same one comes back time after time or if others take their place. So how does one know how many they have?

H.H. To put a real shine on your glass shower doors, wring a sponge out of a dish of white vinegar and wipe down.

Building or renovating? Consult this page for a selection of local contractors to do that very special job for you.

Cancer can be beaten.

Please give.

Bridge 'hot' in Tory Hill

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by Marian Donovan

Congratulations to Adele Barnes of Wilberforce, who has a new grandson. Cody David Ross is a new brother for Thomas and proud parents are Heather and Bev Benson of Lindsay. Cody's other grandparents are Russell and Ada Benson, also of Lindsay.

The Tory Hill Bridge club are enjoying lots more competition as the summer visitors return. Held every Tuesday night, the club is well attended all year no matter what the weather. I have two week's scores to report due to last week's lack of space. For June 28 the winner was Nick Lehoczy, Eagle Lake, second Maurine Finlay of Tory Hill, third Stan Beard, Wilberforce and the consolation to Ev Fleming of Haliburton.

The July 5 winner was my dear friend Ida Holmes of Wilberforce. Way to go Ida. I have been anxious to print that you won. Second place goes to Clare Seeley of Cardiff, third to Stan Beard of Wilberforce and the consolation to Fred Read. The club was happy to welcome back Mernie Bovinizer of Rice Lake, who always manages to bring enough friends for a table.

Highland Grove held a very successful Bass Derby and Beef Barbecue plus a well attended Yard Sale at the Community Centre on July 2. I have not been able to get the names of the Bass Derby winners yet but some lovely bass were caught. More next week on this.

My sincere apologies to Sylvia Cameron of St. Margarets Anglican Church, Wilberforce. I reported in error that the Yard Sale was held by the United Church ladies. I hope this did not lead to confusion as to location.

The intense heat has been very hard on anyone with a guest taken to hospital in Peterborough and Sandy Acres report that some of their friends who come every year had to cancel, due to ill health. Many guests reported cars stranded on the highways with overheated radiators and some who came long distances elected to drive overnight to avoid the heat and holdups. Our visitors from the U.S.A. were surprised to see our grass so green. They missed out on that beautiful week of cool and rain we had and have nothing but dust. We certainly can be grateful for our variable climate.

Well, that's it for this week folks—stay cool.

Local posters win awards

The Ministry of the Environment recently awarded certificates of merit to 13 Haliburton-area grade school students for their winning poster entries in the ministry's twelfth annual environmental project competition.

The entries were judged for creativity in portraying themes related to waste management practices.

The poster competition was a follow-up to presentations on waste management and recycling given to about 300 students in grades five and six at three area schools.

The school presentations each opened with a slide show, followed by an open discussion on the problems and solutions in waste management and recycling. Students then watched a film on recycling by David Suzuki and played a recycling game, using pictures and cards.

The winners of the poster competition from Cardiff School in Cardiff were: Clint Jeans, Mike Hurst and Maggie Pay.

The winners from Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden were: Anna Tomlinson, Samantha Reagin, Caitly Read and Cassie Weyrich.

The winners from J. D. Hodgson Elementary

School in Haliburton were: Chris Whiteside, Kevin Morissette, Ryan Cummings, Jim Dewey; Tammy Moore and Amanda Vincent.

News on Real Estate

by LEE GAUTHIER

QUESTION: I am putting my cottage on the market and have heard that the 'sky's the limit' regarding asking price. I have an old cottage in a great location. What factor will be the most important in realizing top dollar for my property?

ANSWER: It has been well documented (see previous article) that there are three major factors in realizing a satisfactory offer to purchase: (1) LOCATION (2) DEMAND (3) CONDITION. However, in your case the first two are 'givens'. In order to realize the highest offer possible the most important factor will become the condition of the cottage and the property. Just because it's a beautiful lot doesn't mean that you can ask top dollar even though it is badly overgrown. The same pertains to your cottage. A badly peeling building with rotted boards in the deck or dock and covered with cob webs will definitely turn people away. In this market you need an edge... that edge certainly becomes CONDITION. Don't leave renovations unfinished... paint the decks, the exterior, finish the ceilings, make certain all the trim is completed, and the floors covered.

You need not spend a fortune to prepare your cottage but it must look cared for and well maintained in order for your salesperson to bring offers that will be acceptable to you. In the current market, individuals are realizing values 40 to 50 percent over last years prices. However, competition is increasing as we approach the summer months and the buyers are more discriminating. Ask your listing salesperson what he would advise in reference to creating an immediate impression of your property that leaves buyers saying to themselves, "This cottage has the edge!"

We wish to thank all of the people of Haliburton who have made these past 12 years so memorable. For those many who have helped in so many ways: Rob and Jean, Flora and John, the congregation of St. George's, Taryn's school teachers, staff and customers of Jasco, fellow workers in the health care field and to our very special and caring friends who have made Haliburton a permanent part of our hearts. Gord, Sharon, Taryn and Chris.

Thank you to everyone that was with me on Sunday afternoon to share that wonderful day with my family and myself. Without your best wishes and delicious food I wouldn't have felt so honoured. A special thanks to those responsible for making the day happen for me and to our host and hostess for the gracious use of their lovely home. Linda Salvatori
